ARMY CORPS COMMANDS.

The following important order has just been issued:

WAR DEPARTMENT, ADJUTANT-GENERAL'S OFFICE, WASHINGTON, Monday, April 4.

By direction of the President of the United States the following changes and assignments are made in army corps commands:

Major-Gen. P. H. Sheridan is assigned to the command of the Cavalry Corps of the Army of the Potomac.

The Eleventh and Twelfth Army Corps are consolidated and will be called First Army Corps. Major-Gen. J. Hooker is assigned to command.

Maj.-Gen. Gordon Granger is relieved from the command of the Fourth Army Corps, and Maj.-Gen. O. O. Howard, is assigned in his stead.

Maj.-Gen. Schofield is assigned to the command of the Twenty-third Army Corps.

Maj.-Gen. Sleeman will report to Maj.-Gen. Sherman, commanding the Division of the Mississippi, and Maj.-Gen. Stoneman will report to Maj.-Gen. Schofield, commanding the Department of the Ohio, for assignment.

Maj.-Gen. Granger will report by letter to the Adjutant-General of the Army.

Capt. Horace Porter, United States Ordnance Department, is announced as an Aid-de-Camp to Lieut.-Gen. Grant, with rank of Lieutenant-Colonel.

By order of the Secretary of War.

E. D. TOWNSEND,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

That portion of this order relating to the consolidation of the Eleventh and Twelfth Corps has been amended so as to denominate this consolidation the Twentieth, instead of the First Corps.

GEN. SCHOFIELD AGAIN.

AMONG a large number of military nominations considered by the Senate Military Committee to-day was that of Gen. SCHOFIELD, which, after much discussion, was again hung up.

GEN. GILLMORE.

The case of Gen. GILLMORE came next. Senators who had investigated his operations before Charleston were of the opinion that the results attained by him did not entitle him to honor of promotion above his present rank. His nomination was postponed.

COMMISSARIES.

The names of about forty Commissaries who had been undergoing examination as to their qualifications, were authorized to be reported.

NEW JUDICIAL DISTRICT IN NEW-YORK.

In accordance with the expressed wishes of a large number of the citizens of New-York and Brooklyn, a bill will be reported by the Judiciary Committee, dividing the Southern Judicial District of New-York.

PAY AND RANK OF CHAPLAINS.

The new regulations in regard to army Chaplains, which will doubtless become a law, leave their pay as heretofore, but place their rank intermediate between that of Surgeons and Assistant Surgeons, without command, and entitle them to pension in case of disability.

THE TEN-FORTY LOAN.

The subscriptions to the TEN-FORTY Loan, yesterday, amounted to $1,200,650. A portion of the orders were from Holland, and other orders were given, in expectation of a further foreign demand.

FRANK BLAIR'S WHISKY.

RICHARD POWERS, the person who obtained the liquor permit down the Mississippi from Maj.-Gen. FRANK BLAIR, was before the Special Committee to-day. His testimony was to the effect that Gen. BLAIR had no interest in the matter whatever; that the permit was a very small affair when he got it, but that it had been altered by the addition of the word "Rail." He knew who altered the permit, but declined to say who it was, as he did not wish to criminate himself. Some of the prosecutors of Gen. BLAIR evidently feel that they have made a faux pas in this matter, and wish themselves fairly out of it.

M'CLELLAN'S REPORT.

The timorous report of Gen. MCCLELLAN concerning his military administration, lately published, is to be corrected, for the sake of history, by the publication of all his official dispatches. The omitted dispatches now lying on Secretary STANTON'S table make a pile a foot and a half high.

ITEMS FROM THE ARMY OF THE POTOMAC.

A well-known scout named REED, connected for a long time with the Army of the Potomac, and a member of the First Ohio Cavalry, disappeared last week, and is supposed to have been captured.

The Ninety-third New-York Volunteers, on provost duty at headquarters, is to be relieved by the One Hundred and Fourteenth Pennsylvania Volunteers. The Ninety-third goes into the Second Corps.

The Army of the Potomac is to-day immersed in mud.

At an early day a full train of passenger cars will be run over the Orange and Alexandria Railroad, in place of the box and passenger car train now used for the carrying of passengers.

DISPATCHES TO THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

WASHINGTON, Wednesday, April 6.

THE DEFEAT OF THE BANK ACT.

The total defeat of the National Bank or Currency Bill, by so large a vote as two-thirds, astonished both its friends and foes, especially as so much time had been consumed in efforts to perfect it. All of the amendments made in Committee of the Whole, about sixty in number, had been concurred in. The Committee on Ways and Means were willing to adopt all but two, and hence Representative STEVENS offered a substitute differing from the amended bill only in the following particulars, viz., restoring the uniform seven per centum interest, and leaving it under National, not State, legislation, and omitting the section which left the capital stock of the institution to be taxed the same as the property of individuals for State and municipal purposes. The House emphatically disagreed to this substitute. This was the turning point in the controversy—the test that determined whether the bill containing the obnoxious clauses, by the prominent friends of the measure, should pass the House. So it was laid from the table on the motion of Mr. SPEAKER, some of his own political friends voting with those on the opposite side, who were from the beginning opposed to this measure of finance.

GEORGE THOMPSON IN WASHINGTON.

GEORGE THOMPSON, of England, delivered a lecture in the Hall of the House of Representatives to-night to a dense auditory, including President LINCOLN, Secretaries CHASE and USHER, many members of both branches of Congress, and not a few ladies. A band of music was in attendance. Vice-President HAMLIN introduced the lecturer, who, at the commencement of his remarks, emphatically denied, and challenged proof, that he had ever said the dissolution of the Union must constantly be kept in view; on the contrary, he had always been its steadfast friend. His expression, "Thank God, the hour of compromise is past," was enthusiastically applauded, as was also his allusion to what he characterized as the banditti of man-stealers at Richmond, calling themselves the Confederate Government, who promised themselves ultimate success, and the full recognition of their principles throughout the civilized world. The wish and prayer of every philanthropist, he said, was God speed the North, who were with the President, and against the serpent, Copperheads and all, whom they would banish from the land. This, and the mention of the name of "Old John Brown," were heartily applauded. He quoted from LINCOLN'S speeches, delivered six years ago, saying he would not exchange those sentiments for all that had been written by EDMUND BURKE. After the lecture, Mr. THOMPSON received the congratulations of a large number of distinguished gentlemen, among whom was particularly noticed Senator JOHNSON of Maryland.

JAY COOKE.

Secretary CHASE, in a communication to the House to-day, says JAY COOKE employed about twenty-four hundred sub-agents, for whom he was responsible, and secured subscriptions to the loan to the amount of $362,000,000, without which the army and navy and creditors could not have been paid. The cost of the loan was $1,400,000, amounting to less than three-fourths of one per cent, or eighteen days' interest on the whole amount. The Secretary concludes that these services could not have been so successfully performed by the Treasury Department.

PROCEEDINGS OF CONGRESS.

SENATE.

WASHINGTON, Wednesday, April 6.

CALIFORNIA INDORSES THE PRESIDENT.

Mr. CONNESS offered the joint resolutions of the California Legislature, indorsing the President' policy, which were ordered to lie on the table and be printed.

THE TRANSFER OF SEAMEN.

Mr. GRIMES, of Iowa, (Union,) presented a bill reporting the joint resolution, approved Feb. 24, 1864, authorizing the transfer of men from the army into the navy, which, after debate, was referred to the Naval Committee.

THE ANTI-SLAVERY CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENT.

The Senate then proceeded to the consideration of the joint resolution amending the Constitution.

Mr. HARLAN, of Iowa, (Union,) said it was not proposed to exclude the States in rebellion from the count, in estimating the vote. There were now thirty-five States, and it was expected that three more would be introduced, making thirty-eight. Three-fourths of these would be twenty-nine. There were now twenty-five States represented in Congress, which, with the three new States, and Arkansas, Louisiana, and Tennessee would give us thirty-one, of more than a Constitutional majority for the measure. Mr. HARLAN controverted the argument that there was any real title in slave property, or that the institution itself could be justified by the history of the world, or by the sacred Scriptures. He quoted from the Levitical law to show that slaves were returned to liberty when they had rendered a fair equivalent in labor to their masters. He denied that colored people needed any guardianship from the whites, and he considered the control exercised by the whites over the blacks as mere usurpation, which could not be justified by the laws of God or man. He denied that slavery was a divine and therefore a desirable institution, as it abolished the conjugal relation. If this measure passed it would furnish the means of filling up our wasting armies, and also secure us the sympathy and support of the civilized nations of the Old World.

Mr. SAULSBURY, of Delaware, (Dem.,) said when preachers became politicians, politicians could become preachers. [Laughter.] He quoted the Scriptures in support of Slavery. He denied the proposition that three-quarters of the States could do now what might have been done by the original framers of the Constitution. He believed that the amendment would be as good a cause as could be furnished to any State for secession. The Constitution was made by the States in their separate capacities, and was next submitted to the people for their ratification or rejection. It required State ratification before it became binding. In answer to Mr. JOHNSON, he contended that the preamble to the Constitution was not to be considered, but the instrument itself was to be regarded. The instrument itself alone showed now the great blessings of justice, tranquillity and liberty were to be conferred, secured and perpetuated. The power did not exist to submit these amendments to the people in the manner prescribed by the Constitution. He was a firm believer in the inequality of the races. He would not attempt to explain it, as it was the work of the Divine Architect who presided over the destinies of men. He opposed this amendment, not because the people of his State were peculiarly interested in the institution, but from high convictions of duty to his country. Besides, we could not submit this amendment to one-fourth of the States. The times were unpropitious. A time of war was not the time to change our organic law. The adoption of this measure would prolong the war beyond the lifetime of many members of the Senate.

Mr. HALE, of New-Hampshire, (Union,) said he had supposed that there were no reasons which could induce him to make a speech under the present circumstances. Speeches were very apt to recoil upon their authors, as he once learned to his sorrow in the State of Maine, when, stopping at a hotel and calling the waiter to hand, the only thing to be procured was an ancient newspaper containing one of his own speeches. [Laughter.] Slavery died hard. When CHARLES I. was about to be beheaded, suggestions were made that he might resist, and proper pulleys and pinions were provided for such an emergency. So with Slavery. If it don't quietly submit, the pulleys and pinions will be applied to keep its neck under the axe. This was a day he long had struggled for—the day in which the nation was commencing its real life and awakening to the meaning of the sublime truths uttered by our forefathers. The idea of inconsistency between our professions and practices as a free Government, was thereafter to be abolished. He wanted to say a word to the administrators, de bonis non of what brand, once the great Democratic party, that their belief that it was theirs to save the country, and, more than that, themselves was an utter delusion. Taking experience as a test, what did the Democratic party do to save the country when the Executive, Cabinet, Legislative Department, Supreme Court and a majority of the Legislatures of the States were theirs? They could not only not preserve the peace of the country, but they could not keep the family peace, and get up a quarrel and split in their little tovefeast down in Charleston. He asked his friends if, when they read the newspapers, they did not feel that the power of the Democracy had departed? CHARLES I., like a well-bred and sensible gentleman, when he saw the appliances around his scaffold, quietly submitted. Was it too much to ask the Democratic party, like that Christian gentleman, to put their heads under and submit to what must inevitably come? [Laughter.] He felt to-day that we were on the true road to honor, glory and peace.

Mr. MCDOUGALL, of California, (Union,) said we were now in the third year of a terrible war, and hundreds of thousands of our friends and brethren had gone down on the great battle-fields. This was not a time, he would tell the Senator from New-Hampshire, for jibes, jests and fantastic tricks—such at this time as would "bedew high heaven make angels weep." He called attention to the difficulty in crushing our Indian difficulties in Florida, and said the armed resistance of a great Power like the South was no subject for jesting. Richmond was not yet ours. He came here willing to maintain an effective war, and he asked for a million of men and earnest measures. That was not the opinion of the other side, and we were now reaping the consequences of indecision. Instead of putting down the rebellion the time had been wasted in discussing the status of negroes in the Southern Confederacy. He should vote against the amendment, not from any particular hostility, but because it would tend to aggravate the war and arouse the animosity of our present violent foe. As things now stood, we proposed to leave our children, and children's children, a legacy of war. When he looked at our present condition he might well say, "Let the heavens be put in black and the sun hang in mourning."

Mr. PENDLETON, of Kentucky, (Dem.,) proposed an amendment as an additional section, providing that the President and Vice-President shall not hold their office more than six years. Mr. POWELL said he believed that no President who had desired reelection, but what had it in his power to promote it. A free press had passed itself by the force of its own laws. His amendment would not affect the reelection of the present Executive. He was opposed to amending the Constitution; but, if we did so, we should let the world see that we had more ideas than one—that of African Slavery. Let the future occupants of the White House know that there was no hope of reelection, and that unless they were honest, theirs would be an ignominious reputation.

Mr. TRUMBULL, of Illinois, (Union,) said the amendment would receive the support of many members on his side of the house, as an independent proposition, and doubtless his own; but he preferred it to go directly before the people.

Mr. POWELL'S amendment was rejected.

AYES—Messrs. Brown, Davis, Foster, Grimes, Hendrick, Nesmith, Pomeroy, Powell, Riddle, Saulsbury, Wade, and Wilkinson—12.

NAYS—Messrs. Anthony, Chandler, Clark, Collamer, Conness, Cowan, Dixon, Doolittle, Fessenden, Foot, Hall, Harding, Harlan, Harris, Henderson, Howard, Howe, Johnson, Lane of Indiana, Lane of Kansas, McDougal, Morgan, Morrill, Ramsey, Sherman, Sprague, Sumner, Ten Eyck, Trumbull, Van Winkle, Willey, and Wilson—32.

Mr. POWELL offered another amendment, prohibiting political prescription. Rejected, 38 to 6.

Mr. POWELL offered an amendment providing that no bill, resolution or law passed by Congress shall relate to more than one subject and have more than one title. Rejected, 30 to 8.

Mr. DAVIS introduced, as an amendment, his joint resolution to provide for a new mode of electing the President and Vice-President, heretofore presented and printed by the Senate. Rejected.

The bill passed to a third reading.

The Senate then adjourned without final action.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

WASHINGTON, Wednesday, April 1.

HEADS OF DEPARTMENTS TO HAVE SEATS ON THE FLOOR OF CONGRESS.

Mr. PENDLETON, of Ohio, (Dem.,) from the Select Committee on the subject, reported a bill, providing:

That the Secretary of State, the Secretary of War, the Secretary of the Treasury, the Secretary of the Navy, the Secretary of the Interior, the Attorney-General and the Postmaster-General shall be entitled to occupy seats on the floor of the House of Representatives, with the right to participate in debate upon matters relating to the business of their respective departments, under such rules as may be prescribed by the House.

The bill further provides that the said Secretaries, the Attorney-General and Postmaster-General shall attend the sessions of the House of Representatives immediately on the opening of the sittings on Monday and Thursday of each week, to give information in reply to questions which may be propounded to them under the rules of the House.

In order to carry out the intention of the bill, Mr. PENDLETON reported an amendment to the rules, as follows:

The Clerk of the House shall keep a notice book, in which he shall enter, on the request of any member, any resolution requiring information from any of the executive departments, or any question intended to be propounded to any of the Secretaries, or the Postmaster-General, or the Attorney General, relating to public affairs or to the business pending before the House, together with the name of the member and of the day when the same will be called up. The member giving notice of such resolution or question shall at the same time give notice that the same will be called up on Monday or Thursday of that week, or of the succeeding week, provided that no resolution or question shall be called up within less than three days after notice shall have been given. The Clerk shall, on the same day on which notice is entered, transmit to the chief officer of the proper department a copy of the resolution or question, together with the name of the member proposing the same, and of the day when it will come before the House for action, on Monday and Thursday of each week before any other business shall be taken up. Except by unanimous consent, the resolutions and questions shall be taken up in the order in which they have been entered on the notice book for that day. The member offering the resolution may state succinctly the object and scope of his resolution, and the reason for desiring the information; and the Secretary of the proper department may reply, giving the information, or the reasons why the same should be withheld, and then without further debate the House shall vote on the resolution, unless it shall be withdrawn. In putting any question to the Secretaries, no argument or opinion is to be offered, nor any fact stated, except so far as may be necessary to explain such questions; and in answering such questions the Secretary shall not debate the matter to which the same refers, nor state facts or opinions other than those necessary to explain the answer.

THE NATIONAL BANK ACT.

The House proceeded to the consideration of the National Banking Bill, as reported from the Committee of the Whole with amendments.

Mr. HOOPER, of Massachusetts, (Union,) made the closing speech. The issue of paper currency should be under the control of the Government, were because the condition of the country growing out of the exigences of the war, rendered the regulation of the currency by Congress absolutely necessary, to give strength to and uphold the Government. The financial schemes of the Secretary of the Treasury had thus far met with marked success. The issue of legal tenders was not only wise, but was the only measure to afford immediate relief. For if the Government had depended on the State banks for currency, it would have been a failure. The bill under consideration was to perfect the details of the national currency bill heretofore passed, and to render its operation more efficient. He believed that the existence of the nation was at stake on this issue, and that the Government required every legitimate means to sustain its credit. If the war was to continue until the rebellion was overthrown, and the cause of it removed, the people must enter on the work of sustaining the war with more earnestness. We had reached the point where sacrifices must be made, and the people must have more taxation. Instead of increasing salaries we must take means for preventing the depreciation of paper, and giving it a higher value. The Committee of Ways and Means would soon introduce a bill largely increasing taxation.

The House proceeded to vote on the various amendments, agreeing to that authorizing the issue of notes of a less denomination than five dollars, by a vote of 70 against 54, and agreed to other amendments that not more than one-sixth of the notes shall be of a less denomination than five dollars, and when specie payments are resumed such small notes are to go out of circulation.

The House concurred in the amendment that any bank or banking association, organized in pursuance of the laws of any State, under the articles of association which prohibit specified changes therein, may be changed and converted into a national banking association, under the provisions of this act, without any change in the articles of association, and its Directors at the time of such change may continue in office, and their successors may, from time to time, be elected or appointed, in the manner provided by its articles of association.

The House next voted on the new section, that nothing in this act shall be construed to prevent the taxation by States of the capital stock of the banks, organized under this act, the same as the property of other moneyed corporations, for State and municipal purposes; but no State shall impose any tax upon such associations or their capital, circulation, dividends, or business, at a higher rate of taxation than shall be imposed by such upon the same amount of moneyed capital in the hands of individual citizens of such State.

Adopted by yeas 78, nays 42.

YEAS—Messrs. J. C. Allen, W. J. Allen, Bailey, Baldwin of Michigan, Bliss, Brooks, Broomall, Brown of Wisconsin, Brown of Western Virginia, Chanler, Clay, Cox, Cravens, Dawson, Dennison, Edw. Eldridge, English, Finck, Ganson, Grider, Griswold, Hall, Harrington, Harris of Maryland, Herrick, Holman, Hotchkiss, Johnson of Pennsylvania, Johnson of Ohio, Kalbfleisch, Kellogg of New-York, Kernan, Law, Lazear, Long, Mallory, Marcy, McKinney, Middleton, Miller of New-York, Miller of Pennsylvania, Morris of Ohio, Morrison, Amos Myers, Nelson, Odell, O'Neill of Ohio, Orth, Pendleton, Pike, Pomeroy, Pruyn, Radford, Randall of Pennsylvania, Randall of Kentucky, Rice of Maine, Robinson, Rogers, Scofield, Scott, Starr, Steele of New-York, Steele of New-Jersey, Strouse, Sweat, Tracy, Van Valkenburg, Ward, Wallace, Wheeler, C. All the amendments of the Committee of the Whole, on the State of the Union, were concurred in.

Mr. STEVENS offered a sub-title for the bill, it being the same as the original bill, with the exception of restoring the uniform rate of seven per centum interest and leaving taxation with the National Government, withdrawing it from the State Governments.

Mr. BROOKS, of New-York, said that "Buffalo" was ungeneously put in the bill to enable the New-York Western Banks to avoid redemption in New-York and Albany. The bank circulation does not go West to Buffalo, but East, and hence redemption in Buffalo enables the banks longer to keep out their circulation.

Mr. STEVENS' substitute was rejected by yeas 59, nays 73.

YEAS—Messrs. Allen, Allison, Ames, Anderson, Ashley, Baldwin of Massachusetts, Baxter, Beaman, Blow, Boutwell, Boyd, Broomall, A. W. THE WAR IN ARKANSAS.

The Rebels Defeated at Longview—Destruction of a Bridge and Train—Over Three Hundred Prisoners Captured—Another Pitched Battle and the Rebels again Routed—Operations of Gov. Murphy.

WASHINGTON, Wednesday, April 6.

The following has been received at headquarters of the army here:

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., April 1, 1864.

Major-Gen. H. W. Halleck, Chief of Staff:

The following telegram is just received:

FINE BLUFF, Ark., March 31, 1864.

Major Greene, A. A. G.:

The expedition to Fort Elba and Longview has just returned. We destroyed the pontoon bridge at Longview, burned a train of thirty-five wagons, loaded with camp and garrison equipments, ammunition, quartermaster stores, &c., and captured 320 prisoners.

Engaged in battle yesterday morning Gen. DOCKERY'S division of about 1,200 men, from Monticello. Routed him and pursued him ten miles, with a loss on his side of over 100 killed and wounded. We captured a large quantity of small arms, two stands of colors, many wagons, and over 200 horses and mules.

Our loss will not exceed fifteen, in killed, wounded and missing.

We brought in several hundred contrabands.

The expedition was a complete success, details of which will be furnished in my official report, which will be forwarded in a few days.

POWELL CLAYTON,
Colonel Commanding.

FURTHER PARTICULARS.

ST. LOUIS, Wednesday, April 6.

The following particulars of Col. CLAYTON'S recent raid in Arkansas has been received from Little Rock, March 27.

Col. CLAYTON, with a small force of cavalry and infantry, and one battery, went to Mount Elba, on the Salem River. Leaving the infantry and artillery there to guard the bridge, and cover Pine Bluff, he proceeded with the cavalry toward Longview, further down the Salem, and 30 miles southwest, where the main body of the rebel army was stationed, for the purpose of destroying the pontoon bridges and the army stores at that place.

Lieut. GERATHOUNS, of the First Indiana, and Lieut. YOUNG, of the Fifth Kansas Cavalry, sent on advance of 100 men, and arriving at the bridge saw a large force of rebels opposite preparing to cross. Our officers hailed the enemy, told them they belonged to SHELBY'S command, (which dresses in Federal uniform,) informed them that the Federals were upon them, and begged them to hurry to their rescue.

The rebels rushed forward, and as fast as they crossed were captured, and their guns thrown into the river. In this way 260 were captured, and 25 wagons laden with supplies, taken, which were destroyed; also, 300 horses and mules. A paymaster's safe, containing $60,000 in Confederate money was also captured. The bridge was afterward burned.

This and the march of 80 miles was accomplished in 24 hours.

There is nothing from Gen. STEELE.

Gov. MURPHY, of Arkansas, issued an address to the people of the counties of that State in which no elections have been held, and sent it out for distribution with Gen. STEELE'S command. The address reviews the condition of the State during the war, recites the action of the late State Convention, and closes with a stirring appeal to the people of those counties in which elections could not be held, in consequence of their allegiance to the old Government, recommending them, under the ordinance passed by the State Convention for that purpose, to hold elections as soon as they can, with safety for members of the legislature, take upon themselves the rights and duties of freemen, and give their aid to the Union.

Brig.-Gen. NATHAN KIMBALL, assigned to the command of all the troops along the North Arkansas River, with headquarters in Little Rock, in a circular to the citizens of his district says: "The loyal shall be protected, and sympathizers with the rebellion, though they may have taken the oath of allegiance to the Government, will be treated as rebels unless they conform in word and act to the spirit of that oath."

THE WAR IN TENNESSEE.

Grierson Has a Fight with Forrest, and Falls Back Before a Superior Force—The Fight Likely to be Renewed.

MEMPHIS, Sunday, April 3.

GRIERSON'S cavalry had a fight with FORREST near Summerville yesterday. After skirmishing some time, the rebels being reinforced, and GRIERSON'S supports failing to come up, the latter fell back before greatly superior numbers, bringing with him seven prisoners. He will renew the attack to-day.

Vicksburgh advices report LOGAN and LEE at Canton, Miss., and the rebels repairing the railroads destroyed by Gen. SHERMAN.

Affairs at Harper's Ferry and Vicinity.

HARPER'S FERRY, Va., Wednesday, April 6.

Although the rebels show no sign of making an attack on our lines in this department, Gen. SIGEL is working like a Trojan, preparing for any and all contingencies.

Rebels Sent to Fort Warren, &c.

BOSTON, Wednesday, April 6.

JAMES B. and CHARLES W. MILBURN, brothers, and active rebels, sent here from the Old Capitol Prison at Washington, were to-day transferred to Fort Warren.

A soldier named ALLEN was shot dead in Beach-street, last night, while resisting the guard and attempting to desert.

From Mexico.

An official document dated at the "Imperial Palace at Mexico, Department of Foreign Affairs, March 4, 1864," states that the Regency of the Empire having been informed that certain persons coming from parts on the Pacific have taken possession of lands in Mexico, under contracts made with President JUAREZ, announces that "all such contracts are void and of no effect."

This act of repudiation is in accordance with a similar document issued in July, 1863, by Gen. ALMONTE and others, after JUAREZ had left the capital.

REBEL DIPLOMATISTS.

Who They Are and What They Have Been Doing.

A General History of Rebel Diplomacy and Diplomatists in Europe.

The stability, the perseverance, the faith, the single-heartedness and honesty of purpose displayed by our early diplomatic agents, will ever be to the true American a subject of admiration and pride. To some half dozen men was confided the foreign relations of a new people struggling for national independence. And these men, ever sustained by an earnest conviction in right, succeeded against the wiles of trained diplomatists and the influence of a colossal power, in building up a credit that carried us, triumphantly, through the war for independence. Subsequently, on the signature of the treaty of peace, 1783, when we were pressed by an enormous domestic and foreign debt, without navigation or commerce, without credit, with the whole commercial power of Great Britain arrayed against us, and a doubt prevailed very generally in Europe how far Congress could bind the States in their foreign relations, our diplomatists overcame all these difficulties and secured treaties on the most favorable terms. They were, without exception, men of high personal character and unquestioned patriotism; and the student of history, when he reads with admiration their elaborate and able correspondence, will note, with a feeling of reverence, the integrity and devotion to the public interest exhibited by them all.

There are those in the deluded South who liken the present rebellion to the immortal Revolution of 1776. For their sake, it is proposed to show that there is no analogy whatever; and we begin with rebel diplomacy, which, whether we consider the agencies employed or the results that have been achieved, stands out in painful contrast with the noble record to which we have referred. Shortly after the organization of what is called the "Provisional Government," at Montgomery, WM. L. YANCEY, of Alabama, Judge ROST, of Louisiana, and A. DUDLEY MANN, of Virginia, were sent as Commissioners to Europe, at a salary of $12,000 each, hard money, and with a corps of paid attachés in their wake. They went to Europe with extravagant pretensions and expectations, and with plenary powers to make treaties of commerce and alliance, offensive and defensive. Mr. YANCEY was to operate in England, Mr. ROST in France, and Mr. MANN in Holland, Belgium, and the German States. The first was the author of the wide-spread delusion that "Cotton is King." His political economy was based on this maxim, and he anticipated no difficulty in negotiating bonds and obtaining speedy intervention. He remained abroad just long enough to learn the fallacy of his theory, and returned home, a disappointed, and, it is believed, a repentant man. He died, without hope for the cause he had embraced, and as much from chagrin as from disease. His political philosophy drawn from the teachings of JOHN C. CALHOUN, made him a Disunionist per se, and he had early entered into the conspiracy against the Government. His mind was theoretical; he was sanguine and sincere, earnest in his convictions, and with more honesty of purpose than most of his associates. As an orator, he ranked high, and united, in a singular degree, enthusiasm and self-possession.

Judge ROST is a Frenchman, who came to Louisiana in early life, and studying for the bar, settled in one of the Attakapas parishes, where the population was almost exclusively of French origin. He married a woman of fortune, and obtained a seat on the Supreme Bench of Louisiana, not when it was adorned by MARTIN, MATTHEWS and PORTER, but after it had become a byword and a jest. Judge ROST contributed nothing to the restoration of its character; its decisions conflicted on almost every important point of law, constitutional and statute. And to get rid of the evil, the people called a convention, adopted a new Constitution, and reorganized the court—going, however, from bad to worse. The diplomatic career of Judge ROST has been a failure. He is considered an honest man; he certainly has the air and manners of a gentleman. He passes most of his time with his brother, a respectable bourgeois, in the department of Lot. Should he ever return to New-Orleans he will find his elegant mansion occupied as a free school for colored children, and his fine plantation by an enterprising firm from Cincinnati—a striking illustration of the progress of the rebellion.

A. DUDLEY MANN, the third Commissioner, is simply a man of figures and statistics; he collects the labors of other men and retails it as his own. An original idea never crossed his mind. He is a fit representative of the narrow prejudice and stolid stupidity of the Shenandoah Valley—the Botts of Virginia. He is one of the few men whose elevation cannot be accounted for, having done the Confederacy no good and the United States no harm. In diplomacy he is entirely out of place; but as a pre-Adamite fossil, dug up from successive strata of exploded theories, he is an object of curiosity to the savans of Europe.

The whole mission of these men has been an abortion, but a costly one for the Confederacy. In our struggle for independence the Franklins, the Lees and the Adamses, besides their important diplomatic functions, acted as agents for the purchase of arms, clothing, medicines and provisions. But the magnificent Government of JEFF. DAVIS, organized at the outset on a scale of expenditure equal to the United States, has filled all Europe with adventurers—men of little character at home, but who live extravagantly abroad at the expense of the people of the Southern States. When DAVIS was inaugurated at Montgomery, a Capt. HUGH (born in one of the Eastern States) had charge of a military school at Tuscaloosa, and his cadets formed the military escort on the occasion. He made himself so acceptable to DAVIS that he was dispatched to Europe to purchase arms. Going there without a dime, he now lives in splendid style; and it is whispered in official circles that he is delinquent $200,000, and finds London more agreeable than Richmond.

Very recently an intercepted letter from a rebel agent, one EDWARD DE LEON, was published. His precise position abroad cannot be defined. His the nomenclature of diplomacy. He may be styled a diplomatic dauber, employed to fill up chinks and crevices in the imperfect work of others; to clear away the rubbish of dirty jobs uncompleted, and secretly to supervise and report upon the conduct of his comrades. He corresponds exclusively with President DAVIS, whose confidence he long since gained by the artful use of an oily and flattering pen. He is a South Carolinian of pretended HUGUENOT, but really of Jewish extraction; is a man of showy address, an expert Sub-Agent, and obtained from President BUCHANAN the post of Consul-General to Egypt. Resigning this after the election of Mr. LINCOLN, he went to London, and inserted in the Times several elaborate panegyrics on DAVIS and the resources of the Southern States. Although all these documents he returned to Richmond and persuaded DAVIS and BENJAMIN that he could array the Continental Press against the United States, and thus superinduce an armed intervention. The adventurer received a commission to corrupt the European Press at a cost of some $100,000, and his credulous patrons at Richmond wrote down South to their co-conspirators, merchants and overseers, that the war would be over in sixty days! Many of these letters are yet extant. DE LEON understands French enough to order a dinner in the Trois Freres or the Maison Dorée, when there is a bill of fare in both languages before him; but he pretended to DAVIS that he was master of French and German, and would furnish original articles for the leading journals. His first effort was to pitch from the Moniteur a translation of DAVIS' message, which, after employing one Dr. GIRARD to make a few clerical alterations, he published in pamphlet, and laid a copy on the desk of each member of the French Legislature, and each member of the Confederate Congress, as the work of EDWARD DE LEON! His next move was to send GIRARD to Richmond nominally to obtain statistics and other information from official sources to lay before the trans-Atlantic public, but really to promote his private ends. GIRARD persuaded JEFF. DAVIS that he was the attractive subject of interest in Europe; that he was regarded as the most illustrious of living men; that the wisest statesmen expected to see him humble the United States, and transfer his capital from Richmond to Washington; nor did he fail to represent the extraordinary influence exercised by DE LEON over cabinet ministers, editors, &c. The result was a fat contract for DE LEON, GIRARD and LE MAY, a brother adventurer, from which they have reaped large profits and fire Hons of the door, cutting a heavy swell at the opera, restaurants and third-rate clubs. In the letter lately intercepted and published, DE LEON tells JEFF. DAVIS that he is surrounded by incapables at home and abroad, who, like the Bourbons, "have learned nothing and forgotten nothing," and, though he tells the truth in this instance, he is evidently driving at another contract. With the sublime of impudence and confident in the credulity of JEFF., he boasts that he has checkmated the emigration from Ireland to the United States—an emigration in the existing condition of things, as natural and as inevitable as the flow of the Mississippi to the sea. While in Egypt, this man married a traveling Irish lady, and the influence he boasts of in Ireland, though very plainly hinting at chief lieutenants, archbishops and chancellors, is limited to the narrow circle of his wife's relations, who doubtless regard him as JEFF. DAVIS' prime minister.

Dr. LE MAY, now styled Col. LE MAY, and often represented in pictorial magazines on the Continent as the hero of many (imaginary) battles, was formerly a poor physician in New-Orleans. He happened to be a passenger on the Trent, (when MASON and SLIDELL were taken therefrom by Commodore WILKES,) and played the lacquey to Madame SLIDELL and family, and to Madame MUSIS, from St. Thomas to Southampton. On the arrival of the steamer he executed a coup worthy of Gil Blas, by representing to the reporter of the Times that, by his presence of mind, he had saved the dispatches of the rebel Commissioners, and thus defeated the main object of their capture. This statement in the morning papers, duly colored and exaggerated, at once made him a lion among the John Bulls, and determined him to practice still further on the gullibility of the public. Leaving Mrs. SLIDELL in London, he escorted Mrs. MUSIS to Paris, where she was met by his confrere, Dr. GIRARD, a brother adventurer. LE MAY had invented a pistol, the "grapeshot revolver," which JEFF. DAVIS had been persuaded to adopt, and he had secured a contract to have 5,000 manufactured for the Confederate service, to be paid for in London and Paris, at $4 each, on delivery. Not satisfied with this imposition of a worthless arm upon the Richmond Government, the adventurer proposed to introduce them into the French cavalry service. He therefore wrote a biographical sketch of himself, in which he was described as a distinguished physician and savant, of New-Orleans, an author and inventor, a Fellow of the Smithsonian Institute, the confidential friend of JEFF. DAVIS, a Colonel in the Confederate Army preeminent for dash and enterprise, and the hero of the Trent affair. GIRARD assumed the authorship, and 500 francs for its appearance, with a photograph of LE MAY, in Le Monde Illustre. This obtained for him an interview with Prince NAPOLEON, but the scheme failed. Pocketing the large amount due, under his contract with the rebel Government, he associated himself with one CLARK, a shipbroker of Leadenhall-street, London, who claimed to own the steamship Pacific, and offered her to certain parties to run the blockade to Charleston, provided she should be freighted at £5 per ton, paid in advance. With CLARK, and LE MAY appeared a Col. A. P. CHAMPLAIN, a man of vast pretensions and reputed capital, hailing from Louisiana, and claiming to own several large sugar and cotton plantations, and mortgages upon many more. It was whispered that he had advanced the Richmond Government a quarter of a million in hard cash. The cargo was soon made up by R. F. FIOKLIN & Co. of the South, HARDY, SAMUEL & Co., of London; WEBB & ENOS, of Leeds, and others, and the steamer commanded by Capt. EMERSON, cleared for Nassau. On her arrival she was attached by GURNEY & Co., London bankers, for $200,000. After lying in harbor for some months, the Captain and Supercargo were arrested for non-payment of wages to the crew, and lodged in jail. CLARK soon after arrived under an assumed name, and released them by borrowing from one HARRY COVERT, a young Charlestonian, $16,000, on a promise to repay him in New-York, and to appoint him clerk of the steamer. The ship, by some arrangement being released, and cargo discharged, was placed on the line between Havana and New-York. COVERT, in British uniform, went to New-York, where CLARK unceremoniously discarded him, and left him only the value of his experience. On her second trip to New-York the Pacific was libeled, and condemned. Most of the parties who had been left at Nassau made their way south, leaving their goods and the question of freight to be adjudicated by the courts. Mrs. FICKLIN went to Mobile, and entered into arrangements with the Secretary of the Treasury to purchase Government first-class steamers, to be freighted exclusively on Government account, it being stipulated that after two trips with Government cotton, and bringing back Government supplies, she should be turned over to FICKLIN. Returning to England, he purchased the Giraffe, afterward known as the Robert E. Lee, and fulfilled the required stipulation. But the Confederate authorities perfidiously refused to comply with the contract and indemnify FICKLIN for their failure. He applied to the courts for redress, but it is well known that they are powerless against the imperial rescripts of DAVIS. Maj. FICKLIN was captured some months since on the steamer Eugenie, while attempting to run the blockade between Wilmington and Bermuda. He is a brave, enterprising and generous man, and can daguerreotype DAVIS, BENJAMIN & Co. to the life. LE MAY and CHAMBERLAIN came to Nassau on the Pacific. The former went to Richmond and got another contract. The latter had been arrested at Nassau for debt, but contrived to obtain relief through SANDERS & SON. The steamer in which he embarked at Nassau, was captured off Charleston, but the adventurer escaped in a boat, securing his baggage, but at the same time representing that he had lost many valuable articles and £10,000 in specie. He effected a loan of $1,000 from a compagnon de voyage, and soon turned up at Atlanta, Ga., with specimens of army cloth, a model musket, &c. Here he made large contracts with the "Foreign Importing Company." One J. M. VERNON, said to have been formerly connected with the New-Orleans Press, was engaged by CHAMBERLAIN as trumpeter, and the credulous Georgians stared at him as a second ROTHSCHILD. Arriving at Jackson, Miss. he entered into a contract with Gov. PETTUS to supply the State militia with clothing. After feasting the Governor at ANGELO'S, and recounting his recent loss of money by the steamer, the artful swindler proposed an advance of $10,000 hard money on the contract; but (whether fraud was suspected or the treasury was deficient is not known) the Governor refused. He however consented to issue Mississippi Treasury notes for that amount, to be paid to him on the day of his departure for Charleston. To this CHAMBERLAIN demurred, and declared that the whole amount would not pay for a breakfast in London; whereupon His Excellency fired up and swore that he would cut his ears off if he dared deny that his treasury notes were not as good as gold and silver. Next morning Maj.-Gens. TUPPER and GREGSON challenged the Colonel for the affront offered the Governor, and being told that he would have to fight over a keg of gunpowder with one, and muzzle to muzzle with the other, to raise off with bowie-knives, he apologized and vamosed.*

Arriving at Richmond, he found a vast field for his financial ability. Securing the services of an eminent lawyer, and employing the best striker in the metropolis, the famous BOB JAMES, he entered into a contract with the Secretary of the Navy to build six first-class iron-clad steam frigates, binding himself to deliver one on the 1st of January, 1863, and the others on the first day of every month thereafter until the contract was completed. He very generously intimated that the Confederate Government, if necessity required it, might draw on him, on his return to London, for £100,000. He made other contracts with the War and Treasury Departments. The fame of this illustrious personage soon pervaded the rebel capital. He was specially invited to the White House, and soon got on the blind side of the renowned DAVIS. Lady DAVIS was particularly condescending, and honored him with a long memorandum, to be filled by the most celebrated artists and milliners of Paris! Thus lionized by the officials and patronized by her Excellency, the Colonel perceived that he was "master of the situation." Opening negotiations with the largest commercial firms, he soon received orders to the amount of $3,000,000. Delicately hinting to some of these parties his losses by the steamer, and declining to call on the Government for advances in its embarrassed condition, these mercantile firms in Richmond readily cashed his drafts on London for $10,000, and with the gold in his pocket, he made his way to New-York, and embarked for England. His Virginia friends have not heard from him since, but he may be seen every day in the Palais Royal between the hours of 7 and 8 P. M., doubtless awaiting remittances from his Louisiana estates, and plotting some plan to "raise the wind." We must do him the justice to state that he remembered his engagement with Lady DAVIS, and sent her an assortment of cosmetics and hair dyes, and a flashy guitar, ornamented with his own photograph! for the Colonel may be called handsome, and sings and plays divinely. In addition to this tribe of low-flung adventurers, the Richmond authorities have sent to Europe a swarm of naval and financial agents, all supported at enormous expense, and all engaged, more or less, in blockade running and other private speculations on their own account and for their patrons. These men, for the most part, have now no confidence in their cause, but will play out the game as long as it pays. The notorious GEORGE N. SANDERS is the representative man of this class. He is too well known in New-York to need an elaborate portraiture. In the tableau of Confederate operators he is the central figure. He is all powerful at Richmond, and is one of the few men if not the only one, whom President DAVIS fears without hating. He fears his ubiquity, his restless temper, his sarcasm and his power as a mischief-maker, and he does not hate him simply because SANDERS has no political ambition, but prefers to make puppets of politicians, and to employ his own energies in vast schemes of finance and speculation. He is the Mephistophiles of the rebellion, and is never satisfied unless he is plotting mischief on a grand scale, and "heading somebody off." For twelve months past he has been quietly building a number of powerful steamers, nominally for the merchant service, but really for the Confederate navy. He has escaped surveillance during all the excitement about the rebel rams, but has recently been unearthed, and will, doubtless, be at last defeated in his artful schemes.

Capt. HUNTER of South Carolina, formerly of the United States Navy, was the first agent sent abroad by the Rebel Navy Department. He has fitted out several vessels, but for want of interest at Richmond, has failed to obtain the command of one of them, these commands, it is notorious, being given only through the agency of those members of Congress who yield implicit obedience to JEFF. DAVIS; and, strange as it may seem, the South Carolina members are generally in opposition to him. Capt. BULLOCH is another of these agents. He left the United States Navy for the merchant service some years before the war. He

* TUPPER, a few years since, insulted a crippled man in cold blood. GREGSON was, some twenty years ago, a blustering member of Congress, considered a bully-cutter until his cowardice became patent. HENRY A. WISE once walked up to him, and putting his long, bony finger at the braggart, said: "Mr. Gudgeon: If impudence and ignorance constitute a blackguard there stands one."

The Royal Mail steamer Persia, Capt. LOTT, which left Liverpool at 10:20 on the morning of the 26th, and Queenstown on the 27th March, arrived here yesterday afternoon.

The Bremen, from New-York via Queenstown, reached Southampton on the morning of the 24th March.

The Etna, from New-York, arrived at Queenstown on the morning of the 25th.

Friday, the 25th, (being Good Friday,) was observed as a close holiday in England. The commercial news by the Persia is, consequently, no later via Liverpool than that received by the Bibernian, and partially by the City of London—but, by way of Queenstown, we have one day later.

The rebel steamer Florida, last from Madeira, arrived at Teneriffe on the 4th March, and sailed again on the following day. The United States frigate St. Louis also arrived at Teneriffe on the 6th, in pursuit, but the Florida had got safe away.

The St. Louis was still at Teneriffe on the 14th March.

The rebel steamer Georgia arrived at Bordeaux on the 25th of March.

GREAT BRITAIN.

The English news is meagre and unimportant.

A mass meeting, consisting of about 5,000 men, was held at Blackheath, near London, on the 25th, in favor of the intervention of England on behalf of the Poles. Resolutions were adopted, declaring such intervention to be the duty of the British Government.

The Daily Telegraph learns that Queen VICTORIA is about to emerge somewhat from her seclusion by shortly holding two state receptions at Buckingham Palace, one of the diplomatic representation, and the other of the Ministers of State and other prominent officials.

The inquiry into the Sheffield catastrophe has been concluded. The evidence from first to last was of a purely engineering character. In their verdict the jury decided that "there had not been that engineering skill and attention" displayed in the construction of the Bradfield reservoir which its magnitude demanded, and they recommended that Government Inspectors should be appointed to make "frequent, sufficient and regular" examination of works of this character.

Capt. SEYMOUR OSCOMB, who had the command of the late abortive China squadron, is to have the command of the first British cupola ship-of-war, the Royal Sovereign—now ready for sea.

The London Times editorially argues that the object of the war in America this year will be neglected in the North, and the armies of the Federals be employed more for electioneering than for military purposes.

FRANCE.

The frigate Themis, one of the finest in the French navy, had sailed from Toulon for Trieste, to serve as an escort for the future Emperor of Mexico.

The steamer Dryade had embarked 104 Mexican officers at Cherbourg, and will convey them to their own country along with 500 men of the "Foreign Legion" for Mexico.

The Archduke MAXIMILIAN would embark for Mexico on the 20th March.

Paris Bourse closed flat on the 25th. Rentes 66.5.

The Bank of France had reduced the rate of discount on bills to 6 per cent.

The Paris correspondence of the London Times mentions further facts unfavorable to MAXIMI.

THE DANISH WAR.

Copenhagen telegrams state that the bombardment of Fredericia had ceased on the 21st. Part of Fredericia had been set on fire by the bombardment. When summoned to surrender, the Commandant refused. According to latest advices the Germans had abandoned the seige and abandoned their position before the town.

The Austrians had informed the Commander of the Danish man-of-war stationed off the unfortified town of Horsens, that on the first shot being fired the place would be given up to pillage and destroyed.

A Berlin telegram confirms the news of Prussia and Austria having accepted the conference without basis and without an armistice, and adds that the conference will shortly assemble.

POLAND.

Intelligence from Warsaw states that the entire general staff of the Russian army had been transferred from Warsaw to the camp near Kalisch. Gen. BERG was shortly to follow.

The Prussian troops had discovered numerous bands of insurgent volunteers on the frontier, near Inowrazlaw.

The Russian troops were constructing barricades at the principal stations on the railroad between Wilna and the Prussian frontier.

RUSSIA.

A letter from St. Petersburgh states that a great coolness has arisen between the Russian and French Governments, because the former has acquired the conviction that the latter is plotting a coalition in European Turkey, particularly in Roumelia.

An Imperial decree was issued at St. Petersburgh on the 24th, reforming the law affecting foreigners in Russia. The decree abolishes the compulsory sale of landed property belonging to Russian ladies on their marriage with foreigners. The consent of the Emperor to such marriages, and the payment of three years' taxation in advance by foreigners on becoming naturalized Russian subjects, are no longer necessary.

WURTEMBURG.

The strength of the King of Wurtemburg was declining so rapidly that his death was expected at any moment.

AMERICAN TOPICS.

THE PIRATE FLORIDA AND HER PURSUER.

From the Liverpool Post, March 26.

The movements of these two steamers will, no doubt, be watched at the present time with interest. We need hardly be in the recollection of our readers that the Florida, after leaving Brest, put into Madeira on the 28th of last month, where she was allowed to take on board only twenty tons of coal, some water and provisions, and was required immediately to leave the port, which she did on the following day.

The St. Louis (Federal corvette) also arrived at Madeira, from Fayal, on the 23d of February, and sailed again on the 1st March, doubtless in pursuit of her antagonist, a day's sail ahead of her. Her opportunity will be supplied in this manner. Moreover, the 200,000,000 which the French expedition cost up to the 31st of December, 1863, will be reimbursed by the Mexican Government in yearly installments, the first of which will fall due next year. A sum of eight millions of francs out of the two hundred millions will be paid to the Archduke of Miramar previous to embarking for Mexico, and when he has formally announced his election to the throne. The arrangements for the benefit of the English creditors are as favorable as possible under the circumstances. A formal announcement was made in the course of the morning that at a meeting of the bondholders, to be held on Wednesday the terms to be proposed are that the arrears of dividend shall be capitalized (with the exception of £1 10s., which is to be paid in cash,) into a three per cent. stock, and that the £100 principal shall commence with its existing 1s. as its minimum, a reserve of each coupon between instalments on the subject being made by the Captain and by the United States Consul at Queenstown, are referred to by Earl RUSSELL in a dispatch to Mr. ADAMS. These discrepancies, his Lordship says, "will not fail to attract your attention, and will doubtless suggest to you the propriety of making still further inquiry from your own Consul as to the part taken by him in the enlistment of these men." Mr. ADAMS says that whatever may have been done in the way of enlisting the men "seems to have been carried on without his (the commander's) knowledge, and when he discovered it he took prompt measures to rectify the error by returning to port and landing the men." Another reason respecting recruitment in Ireland, shows that the Irish Government, the Home Secretary, and the Foreign Minister, have been in communication on the subject of an alleged breach of the Foreign Enlistment Act by a Mr. PATRICK FINNEY, who arrived in Ireland at the close of last year, with the professed object of procuring able-bodied men as railway laborers in America. The papers in this case were laid before the law officers of the Crown in Ireland, who decided that the evidence would not be sufficient to sustain a prosecution. The return also includes a letter from the Colonial Land and Emigration Commissioners, respecting the amount of emigration last year. It seems that the emigration to the United States of single men was about 15,000 more than the experience of the three years preceding 1862 would have led us to expect. "This," says Sir F. ROGERS, writing on behalf of the Duke of Newcastle, "furnishes a fair ground for conjecturing that recruitment may have gone on to about that extent." Mr. MURNOUN, writing on behalf of the Emigration Board, says that the increase is "not to such an extent as to justify the assumption that any great effect is attributable to the temptations offered to recruits. It is more probable that the high wages now prevailing in the United States, as contrasted with the distress existing in Ireland, is the inducement which has led so many emigrants from that country to America. The number of Irish who have gone to other countries in 21,914, but the increase of the number to the United States, as compared with the number to all other countries, is to be accounted for by the large remittances sent home by Irish emigrants already settled in the States to assist their friends at home, and the consequent facility in reaching that country as compared with other countries."

A LAWSUIT ABOUT THE KEARSAGE.

The Shipping Gazette reports the trial, at the Cork Assizes, The case was that of SEYMOUR vs. DAWSON. The plaintiff in this case was Mr. NICHOLAS GEORGE SEYMOUR, a Shipping Agent at Queenstown, and the defendant, Mr. JOHN DAWSON, also a Ship Agent, trading in the same locality. It was an action to recover the price of a cargo of coals supplied to the Federal steamship Kearsage, when lying in Queenstown harbor in November last. The summons and plaint counts and three counts—for goods sold and delivered, for work and labor, and for money found to be due. The defendant traversed all the alleged causes of action. The case of the plaintiff was, that the defendant was the agent of the ship in question. He applied to him for the coals for her, and did so on his own credit, as the plaintiff, as he alleged, would not have furnished goods to the vessel without cash; while the case of the defendant was to the effect that the plaintiff supplied the coals to the Kearsage, not on his credit, but on the faith and credit of the ship. The case was not concluded at the rising of the Court.

Messrs. Brocoten, Q.C., Serjt. ROLFE, Q.C., and J. F. Townsend appeared for the plaintiff; and Serjeant Sullivan, with Messrs. Clarke, Q.C., and O'Brien, for the defendant.

THE DANO-GERMAN WAR.

DISPATCHES OF COUNT RECHERBERG.

VIENNA, Monday, March 21.

The following is an extract from a circular dispatch forwarded a few days ago by Count RECHERBERG to the representatives of Austria at the Courts of Governments not involved in the DANO-GERMAN dispute:

"If Denmark had been inclined to make reasonable concessions war would not have broken out, and peace could even now be restored if Denmark would only consent to these concessions. But she adheres to the formation of a Eiderand upon the basis of the constitution of the 18th of November, and wishes to introduce that constitution—against which Germany protests as in contradiction to the obligations undertaken by Denmark—into Schleswig. To prevent the continuation of such an irregular condition of affairs the Diet was upon the point of occupying Schleswig with troops, when Austria and Prussia hastened to anticipate that body in their capacity of European Powers, having to demand of Denmark the fulfillment of certain obligations not dependent upon the succession in the Duchies.

"If Austria and Prussia had not rapidly outstripped their action for that of the German Middle States, and if the conduct of affairs had passed into the hands of the party adhering to Augustenburg, seventeen months have broken out; the cause of the war would also have been extended, and the Powers interested in the preservation of the Danish monarchy would have been confronted with complications far more threatening to the balance of power in the north of Europe. The military intervention of Austria and Prussia has temporarily pressed this danger into the background, and would have completely removed it if the Powers had credited that last statement of the two great German Powers, and had not encouraged Denmark in her opposition.

It depends, therefore, upon the two German Powers to contribute to the tranquillization of heated passions in Germany, and to retain the conflict with Denmark upon the ground it at present occupies. Austria and Prussia, upon their parts, will then the easier succeed in not being overwhelmed by the movement prevailing in Germany—a task the more difficult the longer the conflict is protracted. The deliberations of the Federal Diet further abundantly show what exertions the Courts of Vienna and Berlin are compelled to make in order to prevent their Federal allies from giving more serious dimensions to the quarrel."

SYNOPSIS OF THE KING OF DENMARK.

COPENHAGEN, Tuesday, March 22—6:45 P. M.

The Rigsraad was closed to-day. The principal passages of the speech from the throne were as follows:

"We are still alone, and do not know how long Europe will look with indifference on the acts of violence perpetrated against us.

We are ready to do anything that may serve to obtain peace, but the enemy must know that the period is still distant when we shall be compelled to submit to a humiliating peace.

This is the King's farewell to you."

The Flensburg Chamber of Commerce has received upon continuing to make the settlements in Danish currency, notwithstanding the loss by the Agn.

The Prussian cannonade continues without results. The King of Denmark landed this evening at Houis Hav. The bombardment of Fredericia has ceased since Sunday.

THE ALLIES IN JUTLAND.

COPENHAGEN, Friday, March 18.

Danish Correspondence of the London Herald.

Very deplorable reports of the behavior of the enemy in Jutland have been received here. He is said to act with a ruthlessness, and to have established a system of extortion, hitherto unknown in war between civilized nations. A Jutland landed proprietor arrived here yesterday and deposed to certain facts on oath, which he intends to lay before the King. From his evidence it appears that the Austrians carry off men of education and peasants indiscriminately to the trenches, informing them they must be prepared for a protracted absence from home, as they will have to throw up intrenchments before Duppel as well as Fredericia. Each man has a piece of ground assigned to him, the week and unpracticed with the spade being forced to labor for into the night to accomplish their task. At night they are shut up in barns, and have dry bread and brandy served out to them in the morning. A Mr. GRAN, an Englishman, an engineer upon the Jutland Railway, and son of the English Consul-General at Christiania, has been badly treated by the Austrians in Vejle. He was cut across the neck with a sabre, and when he complained to the Prussian in Gen. von GANBLER, was told that such accidents were unavoidable in war. Subsequently he was subjected to further ill-treatment, and hauled off to prison, on pretext of being a spy, but contrived to escape, and has arrived in Copenhagen.

The newspapers publish detailed accounts of the doings in Jutland. Dagbladet says: "The post from Jutland, which reached here yesterday forenoon, brought letters and papers, from which we learn more of the hostile occupation and the shameful extortions carried on by the Germans. It appears that the Commander-in-Chief of the Austro's forces declares that Jutland has been occupied to enable his troops to be supported at the expense of the province, and to make a market for the capture of German shipping. Private letters state that, in addition to all kinds of provisions, requisitions have been made for brandy, leather, tobacco, wine, forage, 5,000 oxen, and 2,000 horses, the total value amounting to $2,000,000. Gen. WRANGEL thus appears determined to repeat the course he attempted to carry out in May, 1848, but was at that time compelled to relinquish by the mistake of Russia.

THE FRENCH-MEXICAN LOAN.

From the London Times, City Article, March 24.

The amount of the Loan is two hundred millions of francs nominal, at sixty-three, representing 126,000,000 in money, and bearing interest at 6 per cent. The real loan is really 200,000,000, out of which the French Government is to be reimbursed a sum of 105,000,000 on account of advances already made, or to be made, such as the pay of the French troops in Mexico, so that the 66,000,000 which the Minister of Finance should be otherwise obliged to find every year, extraordinary expenses will be supplied in this manner. Moreover, the 200,000,000 which the French expedition cost up to the 31st of December, 1863, will be reimbursed by the Mexican Government in yearly installments, the first of which will fall due next year. A sum of eight millions of francs out of the two hundred millions will be paid to the Archduke of Miramar previous to embarking for Mexico, and when he has formally announced his election to the throne. NEWS OF THE DAY.

THE REBELLION.

Another order for the consolidation of army corps has been issued. The Eleventh and Twelfth Corps are consolidated, and Maj.-Gen. Hooker assigned to the command. The corps will hereafter be known as the Twentieth. Maj.-Gen. Howard, formerly of the Eleventh Corps, takes command of the Fourth, relieving Gen. Gordon Granger, who reports to the Adjutant-General of the Army. Gen. Slocum reports to Gen. Sherman.

A very successful affair took place at Longview, Ark., on March 31, where Col. Powell Clayton's command attacked and routed the rebels, destroying a pontoon bridge, a train of wagons, and capturing 330 prisoners. He subsequently attacked another rebel force, and defeated them with severe loss.

A letter dated Little Rock, March 25, states that Steele's force, about 15,000 strong, left Little Rock for the South on the 23d of March, well supplied with all necessary outfit. Capt. Christian acts as Chief Commissary for the expedition. The troops left in fine spirits and hopes of success. It is anticipated that the force from Fort Smith will unite with Steele at a point below.

The Louisville Journal says: "We learn from the highest military authority that the rumors of a formidable invasion of Kentucky are entirely groundless. The rebels have no army in the Southwest to make an invasion, except Johnston's, and it is confronted by the combined armies now under command of Gen. Sherman. Johnston has not sufficient force to assume the offensive, and is therefore unable to invade any part of the Union. Startling rumors of invasion may gain currency on the street, but we have the assurance of the military authorities that no confidence need be placed in them."

A dispatch from Memphis states that Gen. Grierson came up with Forrest on the 2d, and skirmishing began, when the rebels were reinforced, and Grierson's supports failing to come up, he fell back before a largely superior force. The probabilities are that Forrest will get away, as Grierson shows very little disposition to fight.

The Chattanooga Gazette says the statement telegraphed from that place to the effect that Major-Generals Buell, McCook, Crittenden, Negley, Sykes and Newton, and ten Brigadier-Generals had arrived in Chattanooga, with orders to report to Gen. Sherman, is incorrect.

The election in Maryland took place yesterday for delegates to a convention to amend the State Constitution by abolishing Slavery. The convention was called, and the unconditional emancipation ticket for delegates elected.

The Paris, Kentucky, Citizen says Gen. Strunge has established his headquarters in that city, and the troops which have been stationed at Mount Sterling for some time, under his command, are now encamped there.

The rebel steamer Alabama was reported at Aspinwall on the 25th of March as being on the coast of Mexico.

FROM EUROPE.

By the arrival of the steamship Persia at this port, yesterday, we have two days later news from Europe. The news from England is unimportant. A large meeting had been held near London, in favor of English intervention in Polish affairs. The report by previous steamers that the pirate Florida was at Teneriffe on the 4th of March, is confirmed. She left on the 8th. The pirate Georgia put into Bordeaux, March 25. The Archduke Maximilian would embark for Mexico on the 30th of March. Garibaldi was expected in England on the 24 of April. There was nothing new from the seat of war in Denmark. Copenhagen telegrams state that the bombardment of Fredericia had ceased on the 21st. Part of Fredericia had been set on fire by the bombardment. When summoned to surrender, the Commander refused. According to latest advices the Germans had abandoned the siege and also their position before the town. It was announced that the German allies accepted the proposition for a Conference without bonds or armistice.

CONGRESS.

In the Senate, yesterday, Mr. Conness presented the joint resolutions of the California Legislature, indorsing the policy of President Lincoln. Mr. Ganson presented a bill repealing the joint resolution authorizing the transfer of men from the army into the navy, which, after debate, was referred to the Naval Committee. The Anti-Slavery amendment to the Constitution was then taken up, and advocated by Messrs. Harlan, Hale and Trumbull, and opposed by Messrs. Saulsbury, Davis, McDougall and Powell. After the rejection of sundry proposed amendments, the bill passed to a third reading.

In the House, yesterday, Mr. Pomeroy, from the Select Committee on the subject, reported a bill providing that the several heads of departments shall have seats on the floor of the House; that they shall attend the openings of the sittings on Monday and Thursday of each week, to give information in reply to questions which may be propounded to them under the rules of the House. An amendment to the rules was also proposed, requiring the Clerk to keep a notice book, in which any member intending to ask any question of the head of any department, by resolution or otherwise, shall give notice of such intention, and may call up the same on Monday and Thursday of each week, provided three days' notice has been given. The House proceeded to the National Banking Bill, and after perfecting it, a substitute, offered by Mr. Stevens, was rejected, and then the bill was unceremoniously laid on the table by the decisive vote of 89 to 44.

STATE LEGISLATURE.

In the Senate, yesterday, the following bills were passed: Incorporating the Farmers' Protective Union of Kings, Queens Suffolk, Westchester and Rockland Counties; amending the Charter of the New-York Warehouse and Security Company. Mr. Fields reported a bill authorizing the Commissioners of the Land Office to empower Wm. Breylander to build a dock at the foot of Barclay-street, and confirm the resolution of the Common Council thereto.

In the Assembly, Mr. Brandreth, from the Committee on Banks, presented a minority report in favor of the bill authorizing State Banks to organize as National Banks. A number of New-York City local bills were reported, when the Assembly considered the Militia bill at length, but did not reach any conclusion.

GENERAL NEWS.

By the arrival of the steamship Ocean Queen at this port, yesterday, we have advices from Panama to March 27. The news is interesting, though not specially important. Capt. Pim's British railroad project had been rejected by the Nicaraguan House of Deputies. Samuel Ward, Esq., who came a passenger in the Ocean Queen, brings the contract ratified by the Nicaraguan Government for inter-oceanic transit. President Murillo, of the United States of Colombia, arrived at Carthagena on the 16th, in the United States war-steamer Glaucus. He would reach Bogota five days before the inauguration. Diplomatic relations have been broken off between Chili and Bolivia, and the Minister of the latter has left the former country. Peru and the United States Minister had offered their intervention. The difficulty grows out of the Mejillones boundary question.

The emigration for the past three months reaches the enormous figure of 35,475; for same period last year it was 9,551. Ireland sends 13,359; Germany, 6,046; England, 5,484; and other countries 2,587. The largest arrivals were in March, being 13,905.

John Lyons, the burglar, plead guilty at the Court of General Sessions yesterday of burglary in the second degree, and was sentenced to State Prison for ten years.

The Stock market was generally buoyant on the Share list yesterday. The rise in Harlem 13 per cent. Money active at 7 per cent. The Customs demand for Gold was supplied at 166¾ per cent. In the Gold Room the speculators advanced the price to 170¾ per cent.

An active demand (largely speculative) prevailed for the principal kinds of Breadstuffs and Provisions yesterday, as also for Tallow, Petroleum and Whisky, at advancing prices. Cotton was heavy and drooping. Fish, Hay, Hops, Fruit, Metals and Groceries were in fair request. The freight market was depressed, with 405 vessels of all classes in port.

The Long Suspension of Serious Fighting.

Since the battles of Chattanooga and Knoxville, in the last week of November, more than four months ago, there has not been a serious conflict between the Union and the rebel arms, with the single exception of Sherman's faux pas at Olustee, an affair which don't deserve a military name. There have been raids—Sherman's, Averill's, Kilpatrick's, and two or three minor ones—which have inflicted considerable damage upon the railroads and other material interests of the rebels, but even these were attended with almost no effusion of blood. This general quiet has not come simply from the fact that the season of the year has been unfavorable for military operations. During the two previous Winters, battles were numerous. During the four months previous to April, 1862, we had Mill Springs, Roanoke Island, Fort Donelson, New-Madrid, Pea Ridge, Winchester, and the fight between the Monitor and Merrimac. During the four months previous to April, 1863, we had Prairie Grove, Stone River, Sherman's attack on Vicksburgh, Arkansas Post, Fredericksburgh, and a great number of smaller fights. In fact, probably quite as many blows have been struck heretofore during the cold months as during any other season of the year. But during the present year there has been almost an absolute suspension. And what is more, it is probable that this suspension will continue through this mild month of April.

Now what is the meaning of this extraordinary interval in military operations? Two hundred millions of dollars, at the very least, have been expended during this vacation to maintain our armies, and yet they have visibly done nothing to end this war. Is there reason in this? We believe there is; and a reason, too, which the result will splendidly justify.

The simple explanation of this long abstinence from battle lies in the fact, that it is intended on both sides that the battles, when they do come, shall be decisive. Those four months have not been a period of rest, but a period of preparation. As the war has progressed, the tendency has all the while been to fight fewer battles, and with heavier masses. In the earlier stage of the war, there were constant collisions, because along the whole border, between the two belligerents, from the Atlantic to New-Mexico, small forces were posted to attack and defend. The policy, then, of the rebel Government, was to divide up its armies, so as to protect the immense stretch of territory it claimed, and also threaten ours at a great number of different points. As a mere military policy, it was a decidedly bad one for Jeff Davis to adopt, and he subsequently acknowledged it in one of his messages. But it was, to a considerable extent, imposed upon him by a political necessity, for every "confederate" State had an equal claim to be shielded from the Government it had deded. But the result of this extreme extension of the lines was, that they were made so thin at the West that we soon broke through them, and forced our way to the Gulf. From that time the policy has been more and more decidedly toward concentration. The battles last year were fewer and heavier than the year before; and by the time the year closed, each side had almost entirely consolidated its forces into two great armies—the one near the southern Tennessee line, the other in Virginia. The Winter has been spent on both sides in filling up the broken ranks, and in reorganizing, in the completest manner possible, for the great decisive struggles. Our own Government has recognized the altered aspect of the war by appointing, for the first time, a Lieutenant-General, to whose single will both of our great armies will be subject, and who, it is expected, will regulate the movements of each with due reference to the movements of the other—a desideratum which has never yet been realized, and which, indeed, in the scattered condition of our forces, has been hardly practicable.

The next month, May, will, in all probability, witness battles of a greater magnitude than have yet been known to the war. It is possible that even the very Waterloo of the struggle may then be fought. At all events, we may rely upon it, that a collision between the two great armies in Virginia, under Grant and Lee, the ablest commanders of the war, will surely take place; that Richmond will be the stake of the contest, and that both sides will fight with desperate energy. Whether there will be any great odds in our favor, at the great encounter, we will not undertake to say, in the lack of any definite knowledge concerning the strength of Lee's army. But one thing is certain; if we are defeated, it will only be the signal for a new draft, and the provocation to a more tremendous putting forth of strength than ever—whereas, if the rebels are overwhelmed, they can never again rally in so strong array, for their last conscription was universal, and they have drawn upon their resources to the utmost possibility. We may be defeated, and yet fight again with renewed strength. If they are defeated, they may indeed make a new stand, and perhaps again and again; but it must be, each time, with reduced force, and the end can only be absolute helplessness. Such are the unequal conditions of the coming struggle. No loyal man can escape anxiety concerning its immediate vicissitudes, but the grand sequel may be anticipated with firmer confidence than ever.

Confiscation of Rebel Property.

Our courts have hitherto been but little troubled with questions arising under the confiscation laws. Those questions would naturally be more frequent in the Border States, where there were more men who had left their property within reach of the process of the United States Courts, while they themselves had gone to take an active part in the rebellion. Still there have been some men from this City of New-York who have placed themselves in this situation, and there have accordingly been some cases before our courts, though by no means so many as there should have been, we are certain.

Our readers will find in another column some proceedings in one such case. It seems that Lenot M. Wiley, a person formerly pretty well known in this City, had a large quantity of stock standing in his name in the Great Western Railway Company; also, some $68,000 due from the company on coupons said to belong to him. Wiley betook himself to the South, and has been there ever since, an active rebel, aiding the rebellion not only with his counsel and countenance, but with money, quite possibly with a portion of the same money which he was proved to have received from the North through an agent whom he sent on to see to his property here.

Proceedings were accordingly commenced by the United States District-Attorney to forfeit this property, and a libel was filed against it for that purpose. Mr. Wiley, or his friends for him, not liking to see a portion of the aid which he was enabled to give the rebellion cut off in this way, caused an answer to be filed in the cause, on which it was proposed to contest the forfeiture. This answer stated that he was "of Eufaula, Ala.," and on this fact Judge Betts ordered his answer to be stricken from the files, holding, as has been held repeatedly before, that a man resident in the rebel States could not be heard in court, but had no standing there at all.

The railroad company also filed an answer, not claiming to own the property themselves, but intervening "for the benefit of themselves, and as trustees of such other persons as may be entitled" to the property.

And the court, with quite as much propriety as before, struck out this answer also; holding that the intervention of the company was "virtually based on no other interests than those resting personally in Wiley," and that a third person, who did not pretend to own the property, had nothing to say in the matter.

These answers being stricken out, the libel was left unanswered. Now the Confiscation Act, under which the proceedings were taken, provided that the proceedings to condemn such property were to "conform as nearly as may be to proceedings in admiralty or revenue cases." In either of those classes of cases, the mode of procedure is very clear. When no answer is interposed, the court enters a decree of condemnation against the property by default. And, accordingly, the District-Attorney applied for such a decree against this property. His application was yesterday denied by Judge Betts, on the ground that no sufficient evidence had been submitted to the court that this property was Wiley's, or that Wiley was such an alien enemy that his property was confiscable. But he allowed the District-Attorney to take such further steps in the matter as he should be advised, with a view, doubtless, to his being able to satisfy the court on these points.

It would seem as if on the question of Wiley's character, the fact that the Judge had stricken out his answer because he was an alien enemy, might have obviated the necessity of further proof on this point. But, as we understand it, further proof was given, showing beyond question that he was an active rebel, furnishing money and provisions, and helping to raise troops for the rebel cause. We are at a loss to see what would prove that he had given aid and comfort to the rebellion, if the facts stated in our report of the case do not show it. Unless he could be proved to have been in actual service, we hardly see how the case of the Government on this point could be strengthened. As to his ownership of the property, evidence of that can probably be obtained here; and if he is proved to be the owner, it would be very extraordinary if the property of such a rebel should be allowed to escape confiscation, by such stringent requirements of evidence as to his being a rebel.

Life Assurance by Government—An English Scheme.

A social reform of more than common interest and importance is under discussion in the British House of Commons, in the form of a measure to enable the Government to provide Deferred Annuities or issue policies of Life Assurance for that large industrial class now dependent on minor, ill-managed offices, or so-called Friendly Societies. The justification of this seeming attempt to trench on the domain of private enterprise, is found—first, in the fact that the Government has already, by authority of Parliament, recognized the principle of interference with the enterprise of ordinary assurance companies or loan associations, in exempting friendly societies from taxation, and in having established, through the post-office department, national savings banks in nearly every parish of the kingdom. A second justifying plea is found in the fact, that large and safe companies do not want the kind of business offered by the industrial poor; but on the contrary, as a rule, favor the intervention of the Government. Still another argument is supplied by the startling report of the Government Commissioner on the actual condition of those minor assurance companies and friendly societies which employ agencies to tout up subscribers.

Among the facts produced before Parliament as to the swindling of these petty associations are these: the number of small insurance companies projected within the last twenty years was 506. The number founded was 276. The number which ceased to exist was 259. Others were in process of being wound up in chancery, and a few amalgamated with older companies. In the case of those that ceased to exist, none of the money deposited with the companies was returned to the subscribers. In the case of amalgamated companies, about half the amount subscribed was written off the books, in order to reduce the indebtedness of the association in that proportion. The Friendly Societies' Act was first passed about thirty years ago. Since that time the number of failures have approached close to 9,000, or about one-third of the whole number established; and by these failures hundreds of thousands of industrious families have been robbed of the savings of years.

The Government scheme professes to offer but one great advantage to the policy holder, viz.: security from imposition. It will, doubtless, also offer, in time, the additional advantage of easy transfer, where the depositor changes his residence from one part of the kingdom to the other. But its first and great advantage will be security. In the matter of premiums, it will be unable to compete with private enterprise, inasmuch as the Government is precluded from making investments of money which will produce on an average more than 3½ per cent.; whereas, 5 and 6 per cent. is no unusual interest accruing to the investments of ordinary assurance companies. A high premium, then, will necessarily be charged by Government, and we believe the Chancellor of the Exchequer is to limit the amount assured in each case to $500.

By the aid of Government medical officers in the Poor-law Unions, and the voluntary co-operation of clergymen—both established and dissenting—as well as by the ordinary agencies open to assurance societies, the Finance Minister promises Parliament that he can protect the country from imposition in the matter of determining the health and the identity of members. On the question of health he gives the opinion of eminent medical men connected with assurance, that there is no class of the community of the probable "value" of whose lives so easy, and yet so correct, an estimate can be formed, as those of the steady-going honest British laborer. The matter is almost reduced in the case of these to the simple question of sobriety.

Looking at the picture as presented by Mr. Gladstone, the scheme seems to have in it most of the elements of success. And we only make the reflection here that it looks as if the British Parliament in these savings banks and assurance measures, were actually borrowing a leaf from the "paternal government" of His Majesty of France.

Wonders of the Fair.—Seventy-three thousand dollars were taken in yesterday for tickets to the Great Fair; between four and five thousand dollars were taken in at the restaurant; and though it was difficult on account of the crowd, to purchase or sell goods, more than enough was taken in from sales to carry up the gross receipts of the day to one hundred thousand dollars. So much for Wednesday.

Though the buildings were crowded on Monday and jammed on Tuesday, the events and receipts of yesterday show that the utmost possibilities of human pressure were by no means realized on either of the previous days. It has been said that Americans are remarkable for their power of adapting themselves to circumstances; but no such crushing proof of the fact has ever been furnished as at the Great Fair. To-day will doubtless give further and as yet unparalleled evidence of the same fact. We have not only the longest rivers and the biggest forests in this country—we cannot only jump higher, dive deeper, and spread ourselves over more ground than any other people—but we can wedge ourselves in tighter than all creation. There was no such wedging at the Crystal Palace in London. If there had been, few of Her Majesty's loyal subjects would have been left to tell the tale.

We would suggest to the visitors, however, that for the present they glance at the great show as quickly as possible, and get out as soon as they think they have got their money's worth. Everybody will, of course, visit the fair at least twice, and in a few days there will be better opportunity to examine things intelligently—perhaps.

Progress of Abolition.—The election in Maryland yesterday has settled the fate of Slavery in that State—if it were not settled before. The Emancipationists—or, if you like it any better or hate it any worse, the Abolitionists—will have easy work in the State Convention, for they have carried nearly every district in the State. The opposition was as feeble as it will be futile. Thousands of Democrats, thousands of Pro-Slavery men voted for abolition, Only the old Copperhead aristocracy and their retainers voted for Slavery.

The "Southern Empire" men, some years ago, used to talk of making Baltimore, New-Orleans and Charleston, the great entrepots of Southern commerce and trade of all kinds, including the slave trade; but we guess they are now leaving the two former cities out of their count.

The Chenango Canal.—The bill to aid the extension of the Chenango Canal has passed the State Assembly, and awaits the action of the Senate. We trust it will be passed. It is a measure of very great importance to all the interests to be affected by it. The original object of constructing the Chenango Canal, was to connect with the public works of Pennsylvania, and thus obtain access to the coal-fields of that State. It was only by a very curious occurrence of accidents that the work was stopped just before reaching the point which was absolutely essential to its public utility. No time should be lost in remedying this mistake. The revenues of the canal would be very largely increased, and the whole of the southern and western portions of this State would find easy and cheap access to the coal of Pennsylvania.

Waste of Money and Paper.—We learn by a dispatch from Washington that a new edition of Gen. George B. McClellan's Military Memoirs is to be published by Government, including all the dispatches from him which he omitted in his report. The omitted dispatches, lying on Secretary Stanton's table, we are told, "make a pile a foot and a half high." If we knew the length and breadth as well as the height of this pile, we might express a more intelligent opinion as to the advisability of printing it in the present condition of the finances. But, as it is said that the publication is to be made for the "sake of history," we think it had better be deferred till the historical age. It is now the age of action.

AMUSEMENTS.

Academy of Music.—The relapse from the grand opera of the German school—and in that category we class Gounod's "Faust"—to the more lyric drama of the Italian, does not, at the present moment, appear to be acceptable to the public. Without referring to the matter of taste, which so far as the public is concerned, may often be questioned, but in this particular instance is true to great artists and great composers, we may state briefly that the attendance last evening was not equal to that which witnessed the performances of "Robert le Diable," and of "Faust" on the two preceding evenings. The performance, however, was excellent, and met with that hearty meed of applause which the few more often bestow judiciously than the many. The leading artists were in excellent voice. Mme. Medori, indeed, as a singer and an actress, surpassed herself. In the prison scene of the second act she was perfectly grand, and was most happily supported by Signor Mazzoleni, who gave the mezzo role with an earnestness and tender appreciation of its relation to the scene, that was thoroughly enjoyable. Signor Bellini sang the music of the Duke with fine intelligence and success. It is, however, a little too low for his voice. Mlle. Sulzer was the Oriini, and won the customary honors in the Brindisi.

To-night, our Brooklyn friends will have an opportunity of hearing "Lucia di Lammermoor," with Miss Harris, Signor Bellini and Signor Bellini in the principal rôles. On Friday, at the Fourteenth-street house, "Faust;" on Saturday, "Ione," for the benefit of Signor Mazzoleni.

Telegraphic Enterprises in Progress.—The United States Telegraph Company have constructed, during the past year, nearly two thousand miles of telegraph, and during the present season intend to erect more than four thousand miles more. Their lines are now in operation from this City to Albany, Buffalo, Cleveland, Chicago and Milwaukee. And, by way of Philadelphia, to Pittsburgh and Cleveland. Within a few weeks their lines will reach to Cincinnati, and during the Summer will be extended to Louisville, Ky., and St. Louis. Preparations are now being made to construct a line to the gold mines of Colorado, Salt Lake City and San Francisco. A portion of this line will be completed during the Summer. A new company has been organized in Canada, called the Provincial Telegraph Company, with which the United States Company will connect at Suspension Bridge and at Montreal. One of the most important features of this enterprise, is its probable connection with a line to Europe, to which the attention of the public has not been called. This line is from the coast of Labrador via Greenland, Iceland and the Faroe Isles, to the north shore of Scotland. The longest distance from shore to shore is less than five hundred miles—a less distance than cables are now successfully working in the Mediterranean. Col. T. P. Shaffner explored the route in 1860, and again, with the aid of the British Government, in 1861, and found no obstacles to prevent his success. He reports that a large amount of subscription has been obtained in Europe. The United States Telegraph Company have informed Col. Shaffner that they will furnish him with the amount he requires to complete it. The United States line will connect with Col. Shaffner's Ocean line, either at Quebec or on the coast of Labrador.

Our Hotels and the Fair.—The report started by a Boston paper, that the hotels of this City had resolved to charge their guests $5 per day during the prevalence of the Fair, is simply the emanation of a petty malice which the press of Boston is exhibiting toward the great Metropolitan Fair. It is hardly necessary to say that there is no foundation for it whatever.

Death of Mrs. Kirkland.—Mrs. Kirkland, the distinguished authoress, died of apoplexy in this City yesterday morning. She was present at the Metropolitan Fair on the previous evening.

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

Panama, Saturday, March 26.

The Pacific Mail steamer Oriente has just succeeded from California, so that the Ocean Queen will sail from Aspinwall to-night.

Among the passengers by the Ocean Queen is Samuel Ward, Esq., from Managua, Nicaragua, March 19, on which day Capt. Pim's British railroad project was rejected by the House of Deputies.

Mr. Ward is the bearer to the Central American Transit Company of the ratified contract of inter-oceanic transit, of Nov. 26, duly approved by President Mariano.

An experiment of growing cotton in Guatemala has had some success.

Gen. Maxima has been elected President of Honduras.

The Nicaraguan Congress refused to accept the resignation of President Martinez.

The coffee crop in Nicaragua is calculated at about 20,000 quintals. Extensive preparations are making for the next crop.

Diplomatic relations have been broken off between Chili and Bolivia, and the Minister of the latter has left the former country. Peru and the United States Minister had offered their intervention.

The American ship Pendor, from Callao for Antwerp, put into Valparaiso, after throwing part of her cargo overboard.

The French frigate Victoire had also arrived from L'Orient.

The Oriente, at this port, reports the French still blockading Acapulco.

The United States ship Portsmouth, at Acapulco March 19, reported to Admiral Bell, of the Lancaster, having seen a suspicious-looking steamer, resembling the Confederate steamer Alabama, thirty miles to the westward, steering northwest. It was probably a French vessel.

CENTRAL AND SOUTH AMERICA.

Ecuador and Peru—Bolivia—Suspension of Diplomatic Intercourse between Bolivia and Chili—Great Fire in Valparaiso—Central America—Nicaragua Transit, &c.

From Our Own Correspondent.

Panama, March 26, 1864.

The British royal mail steamer Callao, from Valparaiso and intermediate ports, arrived at Panama on the 21st. Her dates from Valparaiso and Santiago de Chile are to the 2d, Cobija to the 6th, Callao and Lima to the 13th, and Paita to the 16th inst. The Callao brought $244,607 in specie, and a cargo of ores, bark, Alpaca wool, 608 bales cotton, and other products, principally for England. There is no news of importance from Ecuador, from which we have dates to the 12th inst.

PERU.

Everything is quiet in this Republic. Great expectations of good to the Spanish-American States are entertained from the approaching American Congress, to be held in April, in Lima. All the American Powers have been invited to send representatives, and the papers express the hope that the Government at Washington will be represented. Unless it is, as I have written you before, European Powers will take very little note of its doings.

The Government has determined to close the public gambling-houses, and prosecute the gamblers, who yearly rob the people of such immense sums of money at Lima, Cherrillo and Callao.

The money appropriated by the Government for the improvement of roads, rivers, &c., and for public schools, is being appropriated to these purposes. A canal is to be constructed by a joint stock company, aided by the Government, to draw water from the river of Arequipa to irrigate the arid plains between the City of Arequipa, and the coast towns of Vitor and Islay.

The Royal Mail Company's new and beautiful steamer Quito, for the line between Valparaiso and Panama, arrived at Callao on the 12th. She was only 23 steaming days from Liverpool to Valparaiso, and 4 days 20 hours from Valparaiso to Callao.

Freights of guano to Europe £3 17s. Exchange on London 37d. for Bolivian currency.

BOLIVIA.

The people and Government were awaiting a favorable issue to the negotiations with Chili, for the settlement of the Mejillones guano and boundary question, in which it will be seen that they are doomed to be disappointed.

The country was quiet and endeavoring to reform its currency. Gens. Ballivian and Sarsa Cruz had refused the pay or annuities allotted them by the Government, both being ambitious of the Presidency.

CHILI.

The principal item of news is, that diplomatic relations with Bolivia have been severed, growing out of the disputed Mejillones boundary, both States claiming the territory on account of its guano beds. Bolivia claims that the Government of Chili shall cease its occupation of the lands until the question of their ownership can be settled, which the latter peremptorily refuses to do, and hence the difficulty. Nevertheless, the press and people of Chili do not seem to expect war. The Mercurio complacently says, in the face of the fact that nearly the whole world is engaged in war, and that Napoleon once crossed the Alps: "Actual war is impossible. God is opposed to it; and do what man will, they will never be able to overcome the obstacles that the Hand (the Andes) has raised between the two nations." Quien sabe. Though it would be a pity to see two Spanish Republics and neighbors go to war just now, at the moment a "Peoples' Congress" is called for closer connection, in order that resistance to European aggression may be more effectual.

Don Guzro Anccheneza, Minister Plenipotentiary from the United States of Colombia to the several Governments in the South, had reached Santiago de Chile, and been received with great cordiality by the President and people. He announced his mission to be "to strengthen the bonds of friendship with the Chilian nation, and to promote a cordial union between nations of the same origin, in order to maintain intact their sovereignty and independence." Señor Anccheneza returns to Lima in April, to attend the Spanish-American Congress.

On the 22d February, a fire broke out in the quarter of Valparaiso called the Port, the best part of the city, and destroyed property valued at $250,000, on which the insurance, principally in London, was $221,600. The Chile Company had $30,000, and the Chile Union $7,000. The stores burned were those of F. Huth Grüning & Co., Green Nicholson & Co., Thomas Cornbein, Grüner, Schuchard & Co., Salas Hermanos, warehouse of F. Huth Grüning & Co., store of Gardner & Co., store of Santillino Hermanos, warehouse of Ross Salinas & Co.

Business in Valparaiso has greatly improved, although no very large transactions had taken place. The active demand that has sprung up for copper and its consequent enhanced price, is encouraging to trade, as well as to the miners and laborers. Copper, which had been purchased at $19 per quintal previous to the arrival of the British mail, was resold for France at $22 on board, and 20,000 quintals afloat were sold for English account even higher. A greater rise was expected. Freights to European ports, from £3 15s. to £4 5s. Exchange on London, 60 and 90 days, 44 to 44½ pence per dollar.

CENTRAL AMERICA.

The Panama Railroad Company's steamship Guatemala, from Central America ports, arrived at Panama on Sunday, the 20th. She had dates from Guatemala to the 11th, Salvador to the 12th, Nicaragua to the 16th and Costa Rica to the 19th March. The Guatemala brings Wm. Parker, Esq., Superintendent of the Panama Railroad, who has been to Central America on a visit of inspection.

[illegible] Wm. Wise, Esq., of the Nicaragua Transit Company, and family, who have been on a visit to Central America, and the largest cargo ever brought from Central America came in Panama. In her freight list is the following:

For Southampton—9 cases shawls, 1 carcass Indian, 2 parcels specimens, 24 bales cotton, 124 packages, 1 package specimens. For New-York—[illegible] bales cotton, 125 bags coffee, 13 bales deer skins, 4 bales sarsaparilla, 25 cases [illegible] eyes, 4 packages sundries, 570 [illegible].

Specie.—For Southampton—17 packages, $12,668; for Paris [illegible], 1 case, $1,554; for Panama, 6 packages, $2,[illegible].

From Honduras we learn that the Presidential election, contrary to general expectation, has been conducted without bloodshed. On the 15th February, Congress declared Gen. Jose Madriz elected President by 15,000 votes out of 30,652, and Gen. Florencio Xatruch Vice-President, by unanimity. Alvarez, who had set himself up as an opposition candidate in Omoa, left the country and took refuge on the Island of Roatan, carrying with him some guns and ammunition; but afterward, it is said, he went to the Balize and thence to the United States.

In Salvador the Constituent Assembly is still in session. A commission has been named to suggest reforms in the constitution.

From Nicaragua the news is of little more interest. Congress, on the 27th February, refused a second time to accept the resignation of President Martinez. It is hinted that the President, in view of an early termination of the rebellion in the United States, foresees that the disappointed military spirit of the South will seek vent in Central America, and will first pounce on Nicaragua, and therefore wishes to get under shelter in season.

The cotton crop is decidedly better than was anticipated after the damages caused by the bad weather during the last rainy season; the total is calculated at about 30,000 quintals. Extensive preparations are being made for the next crop; laborers are brought together from the interior to the cotton districts, and large tracts of lands are cleared for cultivation. Experienced persons, with whom I have conversed, say that cotton at a lower rate than 20 cents, ready for shipment, will not pay in Nicaragua. So that if the United States shall be able to raise the article at anything like the price it did before the rebellion, Nicaragua will have to go back to cacao, rice, &c.

The Morris Transit Company, whose agent, in Nicaragua, is J. C. Wood, Esq., has closed its business with the Government, the contract having been approved substantially as made at Washington with Senor Molina. The term is fixed at 25 years—the company agreeing within six years to make a railroad thirteen miles long, between Virgin Bay and Lake Nicaragua to the Pacific, and to expend a certain sum of money yearly in improve the river San Juan and Greytown Harbor; but the company does not agree to be successful—happily for it—in making much improvement in either. Capt. Wolcott, of the British mail steamship Tamar at Aspinwall, says that the old channel to the harbor is completely closed, and that the new one is rapidly closing, having become narrow, and being only four feet in depth. In order to ship anything, it is necessary to bring it down to the entrance in a boat, lote it over the spit, bring the boat empty over the bar, and then extend outside for the steamer. But even this cannot be done in anything like bad weather.

Capt. Scott, who has just run a railroad 200 miles long, between the oceans, to an island in a swamp that he bought for a bottle of rum, and which his railroad scheme was intended to sell for a hogshead of rum an acre, was thrown out by the Nicaraguan Congress just before it adjourned.

In Costa Rica, the people are getting their coffee to market, and talking about their projected road from the San Jose to the Serapiqui, and thence to the Atlantic by that river. Two engineers to make the definite survey, the preliminary one having been quite satisfactory, are expected from the United States.

UNITED STATES OF COLOMBIA.

We have dates from Bogota, the capital, to the 1st of February. In Congress the excitement produced by the debates upon the question of bringing the rebellious State of Antioquia to terms by making war on her, has ceased, and a general expectation existed that matters would be arranged in a pacific manner. Gen. Mosquera himself, who is still absent from the capital, and who everybody thought would be for making immediate war on that State, in a letter to his rebel Governor Barriga, seems to be averse to an appeal to the bayonet. The new President, Senor Murillo, will take charge of the Government on the 1st of April, and will avoid war, if it be not left him as a legacy. In the interim of the month of March it is more than likely that the resolution of Congress to bring the State to terms, "by war, if necessary," will not be enforced, or be delayed, and then, Antioquia, finding herself alone, will scarcely insist upon flying in the face of the Constitution and laws, at the commencement of a new Presidential term under a new man.

The religious question still causes a good deal of ill feeling in the country. Many moderate persons think the laws instituted by President Mosquera in regard to church property a little too sweeping, and of course the priests will strive to resist them, not only in Antioquia, but in the other States, if they see any feasible chance of success. The law of "supreme tuition of the church" with its curbs and its penalties, has had no good effect, on the contrary, its enemy are becoming every day more hostile, and the moderation of their opponents, more sorely resented than logical, propose more oaths and more checks. In the Senate, a law leaving the matter in the hands of the State Governments, was proposed, but it was only supported by Senator Elias Angosenna Quimada, of this Isthmus, and its author, Senator Arango.

Gen. Mosquera, at last cates, was at La Plata, on his way from Ecuador, to resume the Presidency for the remaining month of his term, and would arrive in Bogota on the 4th of March.

Senor Manuel Murillo Toro, President elect of the Republic, rescued Cartagena, in the United States war-any Alabama, on the 16th inst., and would be in Bogota by the 20th—five days before his inauguration.

We have no local news of importance. Panama and Aspinwall for a few days have been overrun with passengers—the two American steamers from New-York having brought, including children, 2,000 persons, of which 1,100 by the Ocean Queen, arrived on the evening of the 22d, and left for California on the Golden City, on the 25th—the 200 by the Illinois arrived at Aspinwall at 12 o'clock at night, on the 23d, and will be here till about Wednesday or Thursday next, waiting for the America to arrive and coal for the return voyage. The Illinois touched at Kingston, Jamaica, and remained there twelve hours. Before there, we have and at Panama the past week the Royal Mail steamer, with her passengers, from the South Pacific, and the Panama Railroad Company's steamer, Guatemala, from Central American ports, and at Aspinwall three British steamers—two from Europe and one from Greytown. So, you see, including the California packets, we shall count up on both sides of the Isthmus eight large steamers in one week.

The Panama Railroad Company's steamship Guatemala brought 800 bales cotton, of 250 pounds each, from Nicaragua on her last trip. She left several bales behind from lack of room. The cotton crop this year in Nicaragua is estimated at 30,000 quintals, and the people say they will have three times that amount next year—if the worm and the wet don't destroy it—which they probably will. This cotton comes badly pressed, and the steamers will take no more of it, unless compressed into a smaller space, or measurement prices are paid for it.

The U. S. sloop-of-war Cyane and H. B. Majesty's corvette Dragonfly are in port. In Aspinwall there is no war ship. The U. S. war steamer Glaucus, which arrived at Carthagena on the 16th, with President Mosquera on board, is expected at Aspinwall.

Twenty passengers, who thought the steamer would wait for them, were left behind by the Illinois at Kingston. Happily for them the Royal Mail steamer Solent was just ready to leave, and she took them to Aspinwall for ten dollars each, where they arrived an hour or two after their fellow-passengers had stepped ashore.

The Orizaba, with the California passengers for New-York, arrived at Panama this morning. No news of especial interest from Mexico, save what you must have already received from the Atlantic side. The ship Portsmouth arrived at Acapulco, West Coast of Mexico, on March 19. The master reports to Admiral Bell, on board the flagship Lancaster, that he saw a suspicious-looking steamer, which he supposed to be the Alabama, the description answering somewhat to her rig, about 20 miles to the westward of Acapulco, steering N. N. W., under sail and steam. Guess the Captain was scared. Had this been the Alabama, she would have probably wanted to see the color of the Portsmouth's flag. May the one wear Frenchmen looking out for prize-money. Admiral Bell had faith enough in the story to go look for the "prize"—but did not find him.

FROM ALBANY.

The Bank Question in the Assembly—The Militia Question—The Beauty Bill.

(Correspondence of the New-York Times.)

Albany, Wednesday, March 6, 1864.

Mr. Brandreth, from the Committee on Banks, presented a minority report this morning to the Assembly, taking ground against the doctrine of the majority report of the same committee recently presented. The minority report is patriotic in tone, and favors the banking scheme of Mr. Chase, which the majority report assails. The reading of the minority report was affectively listened to, and the bill providing to nationalize the State banks, to which the report refer, was ordered to be considered in Committee of the Whole.

The militia question has been discussed at great length in the Assembly yesterday and to-day. The bill reported by MacCracken, from the Committee on the Militia, on an amendment of the National Guard law, to make the point of the discussion. This bill provides for changing the law, so as to embody in it the elective system for choosing officers, instead of the system of appointments, which the bill the law as enacted. It also provides for the expenditure of money, in consolidating and arming the years, to an amount estimated at about eight hundred thousand dollars.

The debate turned upon the point of making so large an appropriation. It had been objected, when considering the Supply Bill, that two hundred thousand dollars was too large an appropriation, and members held that to now make an appropriation of four times the amount then objected to, would be inconsistent. The fact that the bill had been amended did not, in the view of those opposing, justify the expenditure proposed. Those who sustained the amendment, held, on the other hand, that an estimate of the money needed had been carefully made, based on official reports. The objection made to the appropriation of $200,000 in the Supply Bill, had been based upon objections to the National Guard Law, and had not reference, primarily, to the amount of money. Gen. Crooke stated that the estimate had been made for 50,000 troops, and gave it as his judgment that a less number would not be sufficient to put the State in a condition for defence.

The bill is set down as special order, for further consideration, to-morrow morning.

The Senate have taken action this morning upon many local bills.

DEAFNESS AND CATARRH CURED.

No. 422 Sixth-av., New-York, Dec. 2, 1863.

I was deaf for several years, and hearing of the great cures performed by Dr. Von Eisenberg, I was induced to place myself under his care, and I am now happy to state that my hearing was entirely restored after a short treatment. I was also suffering from chronic catarrh, of which I was also cured by the skillful treatment of Dr. Von Eisenberg. I do but justice to the Doctor in stating that in treating me he displayed that skill and knowledge which have already procured for him such a deserved reputation, and that the principles which direct his system of curing Deafness and Catarrh are such as to render success certain, in my opinion. Many months have passed since Dr. Von Eisenberg restored my hearing, and it continues as good as ever.

CATARRH CURED.
READ!

I have been suffering for a long time from a severe Catarrh, with a continual dullness in my head, a tightness across my chest, a weight over my eyes, which were weak, watery, and very painful. My nostrils were constantly obstructed with a pouring fluid. That frequent sneezing, hoarseness of my voice, often attended with a fullness of my throat, great soreness, and a continual dropping. Dr. Von Eisenberg has cured me of all these disagreeable sufferings, may, indeed, say that I feel a new life. The treatment of Dr. Von Eisenberg is as skillful as it is successful. It is in my opinion impossible to overrate the benefit I have received at his hands. I heartily recommend any one suffering like myself to place themselves under Dr. Von Eisenberg's care, with a certainty of being speedily cured.

HEAR.

Hamlin, July 30, 1863.

I have been deaf for over twenty-five years, and Dr. Von Eisenberg operated on both of my ears without the slightest pain—a thing that I could not believe could be done. I now hear well, and feel as if I never felt for the last twenty years. The dexterity and skill with which the operation was performed evince the highest practical ability. Hear perfectly. It is now over a month since the operation, and I continue to feel as well as ever.

WILLIAM LIDDLE.

Harlem, 126th-st., between 2d and 3d-avs.

No. 124 Allen-st., New-York, Feb. 8, 1863.

I have been completely deaf in one ear, and partially so in the other, for above seventeen years, with a disagreeable discharge from both ears, combined with continual rumbling noise in the head, for which I have been treated by almost eminent practitioner in the City without the slightest relief.

Incredulous Dr. Von Eisenberg, but I must candidly say that I had no faith in his success when I did so. It is, therefore, due to Dr. Von Eisenberg to acknowledge that I am entirely cured; also, that he displayed that skill and knowledge which have procured for him such an unrivaled reputation. As I have had an opportunity of comparing his medical treatment with that of others, I can truly state that it is not only superior, but the principles which direct his mode of restoring the hearing are, in my opinion, certain.

JOHN TAYLOR.

New-York, July 23, 1862.

This certifies that my mother has been for some time afflicted with partial deafness, suffering from pain, and rumbling noises in the head, together with other indications of a total loss of hearing. Dr. Von Eisenberg removed from her ears a great quantity of matter, together with congealed blood, relieving her instantaneously, and all without pain. His with grateful thanks that I give this testimony to his skill.

CHRONIC CATARRH CURED.
READ.

New-York, March 24, 1863.

This is to certify, that I have suffered from very severe CHRONIC CATARRH, with a dull heaviness in the head. I felt my nose completely stopped up accompanied by continual soreness of the throat, the chills creeping over me with occasional hot flashes, a great tightness of the chest and pain, so much so, that every one thought I was consumptive. Having heard of the great cures performed by Dr. Von Eisenberg, I consulted him with but little hope of cure. I am now happy to be enabled to add my testimonial to the great number already in the Doctor's possession, as to his scientific and successful mode of treatment, as he has shown in my case that skill and knowledge which have procured for him so great a reputation. I am so entirely restored to perfect health that I deem it obviously recommend all sufferers from CHRONIC CATARRH and SORE THROAT to apply at once to Dr. Von Eisenberg with a certainty of being cured."

GRAY'S PATENT MOLDED COLLARS

have now been before the public for nearly a year. They are universally pronounced the easiest and best fitting collars extant.

The upper edge presents a perfect curve, free from the angles noticed in all other collars.

The cravat causes no puckers on the inside of the turn-down collars; they are as smooth inside as outside, and therefore perfectly free and easy to the neck.

The Garotte Collar has a smooth and evenly finished edge on both sides.

These collars are not simply flat pieces of paper cut in the form of a collar, but are molded and shaped to fit the neck.

They are made in "Novelty" (or turn-down) style, in every half inch size from 12 to 17 inches, and in "Eureka" (or Garotte) from 13 to 17 inches, and packed in "roll" sizes" in neat blue cartoons, containing 100 each, also, in smaller ones of 10 each—the latter a very handy package for travelers, army and navy officers.

Every collar is stamped

BRANDRETH'S PILLS.
STOMACH AND BOWELS.

The organs of the stomach and bowels are, through the aid of this medicine, made supreme for the restoration of our health, when Brandreth's Pills are used. And there is no risk incurred in making a trial, as the analysis of Dr. Chilton, of New-York, one of the most celebrated analytical chemists in the United States, has proved they are composed of simple and harmless herbs and extracts of vegetable matters, the truth of which is confirmed by all who have used them. In inflammatory cases, in sudden pains, in dizziness, headache, apoplexy and costiveness, their use gives immediate relief, and perseverance cures. They are equally beneficial as a preventive. How important is the use of this medicine! In yellow fever, and all fevers; in polypus, and all tumors or enlargements, both as a cure and preventive; in rheumatism, gout, erysipelas; in measles, smallpox, bleeding at the lungs, and in all inflammatory and chronic affections, their use should be commenced with at once, for they have cured thousands who were given up to die.

OFFICE OF THE MEXICAN PACIFIC COMPANY,
TONTINE BUILDING, No. 60 WALL-ST.,
NEW-YORK, March 18, 1864.

To His Excellency Señor Don Matias Romero, Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary of the Republic of Mexico, Washington:

DEAR SIR: The time has arrived when the serious attention of American capitalists is being turned toward the attractive field for enterprise, with means, presented by the vast mineral wealth of Mexico.

A desire has long been felt by members of partnership to manifest a disposition to be connected in the grants held by this company in these country.

For their information, I beg leave to take the liberty of requiring of you, as the official representative in this country of the Mexican Government:

1. Whether the grants held by this company will be at all times recognized and maintained by the authorities of the Republic?

2. Whether any other similar grants have ever been conceded by the Mexican Government.

3. As to the mineral richness of the States to which these grants apply, and

4. As to the desire of the Mexican Government to have American capital take part in the development of the resources of that country.

A reply to your earliest convenience is respectfully solicited.

I have the honor to be, sir, very respectfully, your most obdt. svt.,

E. L. PLUMB, President.

MEXICAN LEGATION IN THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,
WASHINGTON, March 30, 1864.

(Translation.)

Mr. Edward Lee Plumb, President of the Mexican Pacific Company, No. 60 Wall-st., New-York:

DEAR SIR: I have received the letter which, under date of the 18th instant, you have addressed to me, in which you inform me that the serious attention of North American capitalists is now being turned toward the attractive field for enterprise presented by the mineral wealth of Mexico, and that this has led a large number of persons to manifest a desire to become interested in the grants; that the company of which you are President holds from the Mexican Government, with reference to which you make of me four inquiries, that I proceed to answer in the order in which they are made:

1. The grants held by the company of which you represent, will, of course, be recognized and respected by the authorities of the Republic, because the decrees granting said concessions are in the nature of laws, which all of the authorities of the Republic must respect and obey.

2. I have no knowledge of any privileges similar to those possessed by your company, having ever been granted to any other company by the Mexican Government.

3. It would be necessary to enter into many details, improper for such a letter as this, in order to give you a right idea of the mineral richness of the States to which comprehended in your concession. It must suffice, therefore, for me to say that among all of the rich States of the Mexican Confederation, the State of Guerrero is considered in Mexico to be one of the richest, although it has been, up to the present time, it has been the least developed.

4. The Mexican Government, which desires above all things the development of the vast material resources of the Republic, considers it one of its first duties to favor the establishment of enterprises both by natives and by foreigners, which have for their object to accomplish this important result.

It being, on the other hand, the policy of the Mexican Government to strengthen and draw closer the commercial relations of the Mexican Republic with the United States, it will see with particular satisfaction, the citizens of this country take part in Mexican enterprises, and encourage their industry and their capital, to develop the great sources of wealth of that Republic, to the mutual benefit of both nations.

I am, sir, very truly, your obedient servant,

(Signed) M. ROMERO.

MEDICAL.

$1,000 FORFEITED AND NO CHARGE UNLESS CURED.—Dr. Hunter's Red Drop cures venereal diseases when regular treatment and all other remedies fail; cures without dieting or restriction in the habits of the patient; cures without the disgusting and sickening effects of all other remedies; cures in new cases in less than six hours; cures without the dreadful consequent effects of mercury; but possesses the peculiarly valuable property of annihilating the rank and poisonous taint that the blood is sure to absorb unless this remedy is used. This is what he claims for it; and what no other will accomplish. Its value in this respect has become so well known that scientific men, in every department of medical knowledge, begin to appreciate it; for hardly a week passes that he is not consulted by druggists, chemists and physicians in regard to some pitiful patient who has exhausted the whole field of the faculty, and still the disease will appear. It is let a vial, and cannot be obtained genuine anywhere but at the old office, No. 3 Division-st., New-York City, since 1831. Eight separate rooms and a private entrance. A ten cent bill will secure the Monitor of Health by return mail.

A PHYSIOLOGICAL VIEW OF MARRIAGE—Containing nearly 300 pages, and 150 fine plates and engravings of the anatomy of the sexual organs, in a state of health and disease, with a treatise on self-abuse, its deplorable consequences upon the mind and body, with the author's plan of treatment—the only rational and successful mode of cure, as shown by the report of cases treated. A truthful adviser to the married and those contemplating marriage, who entertain doubts of their physical condition. Sent, free of postage, to any address on receipt of 25 cents, in specie or postage-stamps. Address Dr. LA CROIX, No. 31 Maiden-lane, Albany, N. Y.

THE METROPOLITAN FAIR.

THE INCREASING INTEREST.

Seventy-three Thousand Dollars Received for Tickets.

OPENING OF UNION-SQUARE BUILDING.

THIRD DAY.

The interest in the great fair seems to be steadily increasing. Early yesterday morning, the crowd commenced to assemble, and long before the hour for opening the doors the street was filled with an eager assemblage, waiting impatiently for admission. At 11 o'clock the doors were opened, and in an hour from that time the building was well filled, and by 3 o'clock the halls were completely jammed.

The Art Gallery, as usual, was one of the great points of attraction. It is not only arranged so that the pictures may be well and easily seen, but also with a view to the ease and comfort of the numerous visitors. Crowds of ladies and gentlemen are constantly passing through the gallery or sitting on the luxurious lounges, studying the beauties and merits of the splendid collection. The Department of Arms and Trophies was crowded to excess; so much so that it was almost impossible for all to see the various relics here displayed; so many rare and valuable articles, to each of which is attached some historical incident, seems to attract, and deservedly so, the interest and attention of every visitor. The room is far too small for the very valuable collection, and consequently many have to wait a vehicle for their turn. It is, however, well worth waiting for.

The Indian department, of course, very well patronized. Every lady and child who entered the building seemed to think they had not seen half the fair unless they saw the Indians. They gave several performances during the day and evening, at each of which the room was more than crowded, and many were refused admission. The Curiosity Shop was another great feature. It seemed as though the people would never tire in viewing the great collection of curious articles of all ages and all kinds, and which were brought from all portions of the globe. From early morn to the closing of the fair, there was not a moment's cessation; crowd after crowd went through the rooms, examining the various articles, and went away determined to come again.

It would take a week to fully see and appreciate all the articles here collected, and the ladies seem to be fully aware of the fact. The toy department was another great feature. How the children did enjoy it! No child could be induced to pass the stand without taking a good long look at the numerous delights of childhood. Dolls, tops, whips, soldiers, wagons, trumpets, rattles, and a variety that would almost set Santa Claus crazy, was here displayed to their wondering eyes. And almost every mother was obliged to purchase some toy for her little one, if for no other reason, for the "sake of peace and quiet."

The Roman Gallery is not yet ready; the goods are expected daily; they are unavoidably detained, for ships will not sail faster even if fairs are waiting. When they do come, however, it will be one of the most prominent departments of the fair. The articles brought from the Holy City, will, in many, be of great interest.

The Machinery Department is now under full headway. All the engines are in working order, and some are very novel and attractive. A beautifully-finished Andrews oscillating engine, presented by W. D. Andrews & Bro., and the governor and patent valve attached, presented by Pickersgill, Davis & Co., were greatly admired by parties who were judges of machinery. A portable drilling machine, a new steam boiling machine, and numerous other machines equally beautiful and perfect, are here to be seen. The ladies too, of course, cannot know much of the workings of a steam engine, gather around these engines and seem to think them the greatest inventions of the age. Perhaps they are not far from right.

The swords for the army and navy officers who shall receive the greatest number of votes at the close of the fair, are continually surrounded by admiring crowds, great numbers of whom deposit their dollar and cast their vote for their favorite. At the close of the fair for the evening, Gen. McClellan had received 482 votes, and Gen. Grant 435. The vote for the navy sword was pretty evenly divided between Admirals Farragut and Dupont and Commodore Rowan.

The refreshment saloon was even more crowded than on Tuesday; it is getting to be better known, and as it is better known it is better patronized. People are now beginning to learn that they can get a very nice lunch, served up in very nice style, and for a very moderate price; and, as the ladies' appetites always are good, are particularly good when at fairs or other places where novelty adds to the enjoyment of the feast, it is probable the refreshment saloon will be one of the best paying institutions of the fair for where does the young gallant exist who would escort his lady through such an immense building as that in which the fair is held, through so many halls, and galleries, and rooms, without inviting her afterward to partake of a "little bite." The Washington Irving Cottage was constantly filled, the ladies seeming to think it a duty to visit the temple of Salmagundi, and thus honor the memory of the great author. The floral temple was also greatly admired. It is certainly most beautiful, standing directly in the centre of the fair; its beautiful flowers and evergreens add a beautiful and refreshing appearance to the splendor of the goods exhibited near it, while their delicate and delicious perfume, so grateful to the senses, combined with the enchanting music and the number of fair ladies who flit along so gracefully and cheerfully through the departments of the fair, almost make one think himself in Elysium rather than on simple mother earth and at the great Sanitary Fair. The Fire Department, never behind, was continually surrounded with an anxious and inquiring crowd of ladies, all eager to see what the firemen of New-York had done for the soldiers, and their expressions of astonishment and pleasure, when they saw the great variety of beautiful and valuable goods contributed, must have been very gratifying not only to the noble firemen, but also to the patriotic ladies who attend their stand. Great numbers of the articles have been sold, the only trouble being that the fair attendants had scarcely time to do up the parcels and make change. If it only continues as it has begun, and it seems more than probable it will, the firemen will even exceed the sum they originally expected to raise. The "Hairy Eagle" prospered finely; numbers of gentlemen were willing to give the dollar and place their signatures in the album which is to be presented to the President. Numerous officers of the army and navy have signed—among them we noticed the names of Maj.-Gen. Dix and Major C. O. Johns, of his Staff. The Ship-building Department, which is situated just at the end of the Machinery Department, received much attention. The room is fitted up in the style of the cabin of an ocean steamer, the wall decorated with numerous models of celebrated vessels which have been built by Mr. William H. Webb, and with flags and signals. In the room are exhibited several very beautiful boats; a large and handsome model of the steamboat Isaac Newton; a very highly polished ship's gun; the captain's gig, and considerable brass work belonging to the new Italian frigate, and many other articles interesting to the admirers of naval architecture. Another new stand was opened yesterday, which possesses great attractions for all mortals who are blest with a "continual thirst." Don't start, reader, it is only a soda water stand, where this delicious beverage is supplied at the low price of ten cents per glass. Another interesting peculiarity of this stand is that no change is given back—the thirsty mortal must either remain thirsty, provide the exact change, or if he gives a stamp of a larger denomination, go away with the proud feeling that he has done more for the poor soldier than the luckier institutional who was just ahead of him, and who had a ten cent stamp.

The number of persons present was even larger than the day before. Twelve thousand season tickets were sold, and the sum received for tickets alone was seventy-three thousand dollars.

The sale of goods was commenced yesterday, and the way they vanished from the counters was astonishing, every lady wishing to take home some article to be shown as having been purchased at the great fair, and also satisfied that at the fair they could purchase any article they wished as cheap, if not cheaper, than they could elsewhere. What was the total amount received it is impossible so soon to know, but it certainly must have been very great.

The police were, as usual, on the alert, and were very valuable in guiding visitors to the various departments. They found on the floor and about the building over one hundred articles, which they brought to headquarters, many of which were very valuable, and many of which were returned to their owners. Detectives McDougal, Radford and Burnett arrested three female pickpockets, who were indicated with the "pickpocket" signs we described yesterday, and attended by two police officers, escorted through the fair.

To-day, the price of admission will be fifty cents—it is therefore probable that the building will again be packed, if possible, even more closely than it was yesterday.

THE OPENING EXERCISES AT THE UNION-SQUARE FAIR BUILDING—ADDRESS BY HON. SAMUEL RUGGLES—GRAND CONCERT, ETC.

The Fair building on Union-square was formally opened last evening, with appropriate ceremonies and a grand concert by the German Liederkranz, assisted by Mr. E. Mollenhauer and a select orchestra of forty performers. The exercises commenced by a selection from the national airs, given by the band.

When the music ceased, Charles King, Esq., President of Columbia College, called the house to order and said: Inasmuch as we are assembled here in one of the holiest causes, I would commence by asking a prayer from Rev. Dr. Dix.

The audience reverently rose and remained upon their feet while Dr. Dix offered the blessing of Heaven upon the enterprises in which the Sanitary Commission were now engaged.

At the desired [illegible] of Mr. King, President at Large, we now have the pleasure of calling upon Hon. Samuel B. Ruggles. Met as we are in Union-square, a word that thrills through every loyal heart, we could not more fully introduce the occasion here than by introducing one acquainted, with the square from its beginning, and who has contributed largely to the intellectual and physical riches of the country. I present to you Hon. Samuel B. Ruggles.

MR. RUGGLES' ADDRESS.

The speaker said he desired to tender to the ladies, the high-minded and noble-hearted women of New-York, his thanks for the honor they had shown him on this most interesting occasion. The Great Metropolitan Fair, the splendid offspring of that wonderful energy and devoted perseverance has already been inaugurated, and formally ushered into the world, and it only remains at their invitation to show the reasons that led to the selection of Union-square as one of the scenes of their noble and unrivaled pageant. It was historical and classic ground, and associated with some of the most eventful scenes of Revolutionary history. It was one of the favorite resorts of the Dutch burghers of New-Amsterdam. Here were those delicious abodes in which the early inhabitants found those surpassing "creature comforts" which their fair descendants have this day disentombed, dug up and reproduced in that unsurpassable apartment known as the Knickerbocker Kitchen. Let all who would renscend the stream of Time and creep back two centuries in antiquity, rapt in this sacred inclosure, there to be ministered to by angels in Dutch attire, adding all the refinement of modern society to the sterling worth of those ancestors whose names they so proudly and worthily bear.

It was Gouverneur Morris, one of the founders of the American Constitution, who, with eagle-eye, perceiving the future, selected the present site of this building to become the centre of the Metropolis, and stamped indelibly upon our Island of Manhattan the large public square to be called "Union-place." In 1834 it was laid out in its present form, and at that time it was objected to the elliptical form of the inclosure that it would cut off large open spaces at the corners to be filled in with arid pavement, but it was adopted upon the earnest assurance of its advocates that in great public exigencies of the country, requiring the assemblage of large masses of our citizens, the time might come that these open spaces would be needed. The history of this rebellion has singularly fulfilled the prediction. Can any man or woman forget the eventful and memorable April of 1861, the sublime and almost instantaneous "musket meetings" that were congregated at once in this same square, in these same national spaces? Union-square has fairly won a place in American history, and intends to keep it.

The speaker alluded eloquently to the working of the Sanitary Commission and the devoted energy with which the work had been carried on. In conclusion, he said: Nor have we any words wherewith to pay the women of New-York, but to give them our hearts, our inmost hearts, and our most earnest prayers. The God of Justice will not withhold their full reward nor look unmoved on labors like theirs.

The address of the distinguished speaker was received throughout with great applause from a large and fashionable audience.

The programme of the concert was carried out in full, the music, both instrumental and vocal, being beyond all praise.

This hall in the Fourth-avenue wing is especially designed for concerts and performances for the children. It has been fitted up under the superintendence of Mr. Weiss, the architect of the entire building, who has displayed the most perfect taste in the decorations of this room, which is the largest in the whole fair. It was filled last evening to its utmost capacity, not even standing-room remaining when the performances commenced.

THE KNICKERBOCKER KITCHEN.

This great institution of the fair was in full blast last night. The ancient darkey in the chimney corner scraped away upon his still more ancient fiddle. The ladies were all dressed in costume, and visitors thronged the room to such an extent that it was found necessary to close the doors at intervals during the evening, in order that those who were inside might have a chance to see something of the multitudinous curiosities collected together.

The International Department was also crowded to repletion; so much so that it was impossible to see anything but whiskers and bonnets with pretty faces in them, moving about or trying to move about.

THE BILLIARD TOURNAMENT.

The benefit of the Sanitary Commission took place at Irving Hall yesterday afternoon and evening. The attendance was meagre, and we regret as a pecuniary success, it was in no way commensurate with the fine entertainment offered. All the players announced were promptly on hand, except Messrs. Seereiter, Foley, McDevitt, Fox and Nelms. The play commenced with a bout of 250 points up, between John Deery, of Washington, and Wm. Goldthwait, of this City. The former started off with a rush, and had nearly won the game in five innings, his highest run being 103; but Goldthwait displayed his usual good nerve, making successive runs of 96, 35 and 40, and finally coming off conqueror.

The next, a match of 21 points up, C. Bird of Philadelphia and Isidore Gougrand, of Washington, was won by the former by 21 points to Isidor 7.

Dudley Kavanagh, the champion, and his talented pupil, Melvin Foster, was the next in order, in a game of 500 points up, caroms. It was completed in 31 innings. Foster vanquished the master by 500 points to 376. The highest runs were: Foster, 68, 56, 56, 50; Kavanagh, 72, 50. The day's exercises closed with a dash of 100 up—Phelan and Kavanagh—caroms, "shove" barred. Phelan won in 9 innings, with 49 points to spare.

EVENING.

There was about 250 persons present in the evening, the ladies occupying seats in the gallery. The first game was by E. Cahill, of New-York, and C. Bird, of Philadelphia, 200 points up, around the table. Cahill winning by 60 points. This was followed by a match of 500 points up, Phelan against Philip Tieman, of Cincinnati. This game was one of the features of the whole series. The Western champion starting off with a brilliancy which really astonished all beholders, but after a few runs he settled down to an easy gait, we thought in order to not make his friends too confident of the results of his exertions this evening when he will contest with Kavanagh for the championship and one thousand dollars. His highest runs were 107, 74 and 49; Phelan's, 81 and 41. Tieman won the game with 103 to spare. The affair closed with a game of 200 points (caroms) up, between Dudley Kavanagh and William Goldthwait. The former won in eight innings, by 149 points. His highest run was 79. Goldthwait, 22. The average was 25.

THE MATCH FOR THE CHAMPIONSHIP takes place this evening at Irving Hall. Play commences at 8 o'clock.

MARINE DISASTERS.

Arrival of the Steamer Saxon at Boston—The Ship C. Grinnell in Distress.

BOSTON, Wednesday, April 6.

Mr. George W. Snow, Clerk of the steamer Saxon, from Philadelphia for Boston, which met with a disaster on Nantucket Shoals, reached this City tonight. He reports, at 2½ P. M., Sunday last, fell in with the ship C. Grinnell, Capt. Spencer, from Liverpool for New-York, with 150 passengers, showing a signal of distress. She was at anchor inside of Five Fathom Bank, having thumped over the shoal.

The Saxon bore down to her, and was requested to tow the ship into port. A hawser was got to the vessel, but it parted. Other attempts were made to fasten a line on board, but proved unsuccessful. It was then determined that the ship should try to work herself clear of the bank, the steamer acting as pilot. This attempt was successful, and the ship having got beyond danger, proceeded on her voyage. It was supposed that she was tight, or, at least, did not leak to any serious extent, as no further assistance was asked of the steamer.

PROVINCETOWN, Mass., Wednesday, April 6.

The British schooner Poem, of Halifax, N. S., has arrived here, leaky and short of provisions.

EXPLOSIONS AND FIRES.

Explosion in Philadelphia—Loss of Life.

PHILADELPHIA, Wednesday, April 6.

A large boiler at Merrick & Sons, "Southwark Foundry," exploded this morning, causing much loss of life and a great destruction of property.

SECOND DISPATCH.

PHILADELPHIA, Wednesday, April 6.

Seven workmen were killed and over thirty wounded by the explosion at the Southwark Foundry.

The boiler-house was situated in the centre of the buildings, forming a hollow square. It contained two boilers, one of which exploded, and displacing the other so that operations on the works had to be suspended.

Seven hundred men are temporarily thrown out of employment by the disaster.

Several others will probably die.

Ten of the wounded are at the hospital, and the remainder at their homes.

The boiler was torn into two pieces, one portion of which was thrown fifty feet distant, demolishing a pattern-shop, and damaging other buildings.

The explosion will cause much delay on machinery for Government steamers.

Large Fire in Boston—Loss $300,000.

BOSTON, Wednesday, April 6.

Shortly after 12 o'clock last night a fire broke out in Freemasons' Hall, which, together with the Winthrop House, in the same block, was totally destroyed. Loss $300,000.

SECOND DISPATCH.

BOSTON, Wednesday, April 6.

Only the walls of the Freemasons' Hall and the Winthrop House remain standing this morning.

All the guests of the hotel escaped.

But very little property was saved.

Mr. Sleeper, proprietor of the Winthrop House, loses about $50,000 in furniture and fixtures.

The destruction of Freemasons' Hall involves a loss of $100,000. The building was owned by Freemasons and was partially insured. The property originally cost $100,000, and $56,000 had recently been invested in repairs.

Freemasons' Hall was situated on the corner of Boylston and Tremont streets.

Large Fire Raging in Buffalo.

BUFFALO, Tuesday, April 6—3 P. M.

A large fire is now raging at the oil refineries of Warewell & Wheeler and Atwater & Hawes, at the foot of Maryland-street.

It is rumored that several persons have been injured and two killed.

The loss will be very large. There is no insurance.

[illegible] of the [illegible] in which the present country has been so prolific.

I cannot close this communication without adding a few words to point out the importance of this great undertaking to the hard-working classes of the City. In the first place, the outlay of eight or ten millions of money in constructing the work, will prove a source of large profit to the class, as well as to all others. But this is not what I desire to allude to. If the facility it will afford them for reaching our beautiful Park, at all seasons of the year, and also of availing themselves of cheap excursions on the BAY, particularly on a Sunday afternoon, when trains should be run specially for their benefit. As a sanitary measure, the value cannot be over-rated. At present, the time required to reach either the Park or the Bay by stage or street-car, and the totally inadequate supply of conveyances, deters thousands upon thousands from availing themselves of these healthy recreations, and drives them to the numerous haunts for the idle and vicious. Besides these classes, the trains during the mid-day hours, will be filled with the nurses and children of the better classes, going to the Park, or the Bay, in search of fresh air and healthy amusement.

Whilst the poorer portion of the community will derive so many, and such important advantages from this work, the wealthier will realize corresponding benefits, in the facilities it will afford them for reaching the country, and enjoying the luxury of a suburban residence. I am informed by business gentlemen residing within twenty miles of the City on the Sound, that the minimum time required to reach Wall-street and return, is over one and a half hours each way; and this is often extended to two hours—the journey through the City by horse car or stage, sometimes occupying less than one hour. By the underground line this latter will certainly be reduced to a quarter of an hour, whilst the necessity for change of conveyance will be obviated.

In conclusion, I believe I am warranted in saying, that the work will be proceeded with without delay, the moment the necessary legislation is obtained. The company is now fully organized, under the General Railroad Laws of this State, and embraces the names of a large number of the most eminent merchants, bankers, railway men, and other influential gentlemen of the City. This circumstance, taken in connection with the intrinsic merits of the enterprise, and the universal favor with which it is regarded, commends it to the earnest attention of our Legislature. Yours, &c.,

H. B. WILLSON.

Case of Government Loans—Jay Cooke and the Five-Twenties.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

WILMINGTON, Saturday, April 2, 1864.

The commissions usually allowed to agents for negotiating public loans in Europe and the United States are not generally known, and the sources of information are not easy of access, even to the professional dealers in Government debts and funds. Our investigations, made with due care, give us the following facts:

The British permanent debt and national loans during the present century have been managed and negotiated by the Bank of England. For the management of the funded debt, which for the last fifty years has ranged from £800,000,000 to £805,000,000, the Bank, since the year 1844, has been paid or allowed £240 per million on the capital of the debt on £600,000,000, and £300 per million on all excess above £600,000,000.

McCULLOCH'S Dictionary, article "Funds," in tabular statement, puts the expense of management, as settled with the Bank, at £96,019, for the year 1850, the total debt managed being then £805,756,119; but this £96,019 is only the remainder of the charge for management after deducting £180,000 per annum, paid or allowed by the Bank as composition for exemption from stamp duties upon its circulating notes, fixed by the charter of 1844. The total allowance for management is, therefore, one-thirteenth of one per cent. per annum upon the capital of the national debt.

For conducting public loans, the bank receives besides, one-twelfth of one per cent.

The chief compensation for the performance of all these duties, however, is derived from the public deposits, which range about ten millions, and the cash held for disbursement to the army and navy, which, for the year 1861, amounted to £28,188,911. The bank also holds the dividends upon the public debt until paid, and the unclaimed dividend for years, amounting, at various dates, to near a million.

From the bank returns it appears that it is able to lend the whole of the public deposits, which pay more than £300,000 per annum.

From the year 1817 to 1836, the United States Bank conducted our national loans, received the public deposits, and disbursed them through the agency of its branches, without charge, the use of the deposits being regarded as sufficient compensation for all such services.

The kinds and rates of payment for negotiating public loans in these instances, gives us no help in estimating the commissions for which we are inquiring.

But we have some instances in our own history that may serve as a guide:

In 1813 one-fourth of one ⅌ cent. was allowed to persons for procuring subscriptions to a loan of seven millions and a half, and one-eighth of one ⅌ cent. was allowed to the Cashiers of the Banks that received and paid the money into the Treasury. In 1814 one-fourth of one ⅌ cent. was allowed to persons for collecting small subscriptions, and aggregating them into single offers of $25,000—the minimum bids accepted under the act authorizing the loan. In 1813 Mr. GALLATIN allowed this quarter ⅌ cent. to JOHN JACOB ASTOR, upon his own subscription of $2,250,000. In 1815 Mr. DALLAS made similar terms with the Banks and Collectors of Subscriptions. In 1846 the Independent Treasury system was established, and its salaried officers were required to transact the business of our loans without commissions; nevertheless, in 1848, a sum not exceeding one-tenth of one ⅌ cent. was appropriated for the employment of agents and other expenses incident to a loan of sixteen millions.

From all the instances which we have examined, it appears that three-eighths of one per cent. has been the rate of compensation allowed to agents other than Government officers, for negotiating loans.

The commissions of JAY COOKE upon the loan of the "five-twenties," as we are informed, were limited in gross to three-eighths of one per cent., which the contract bound him to apply as follows: one-eighth to his sub-agents, one-eighth to expenses of publication and other means of popularizing and diffusing the loan over the whole country, and the remaining eighth as his own compensation for risk, labor, superintendence, responsibility for his sub-agents, pay of his own employes, and transportation of all receipts into the Treasury.

Of the five hundred and ten millions sold, Mr. COOKE disposed of three hundred and sixty millions, and the sub-treasurers the balance. The sub-treasuries, we believe, generally allowed one-eighth to purchasers of large amounts for the purpose of resale. What is the exact amount thus allowed to such purchasers we do not know; but it was not considerable upon the one hundred and fifty millions thus sold by the Government officers.

Mr. COOKE, we are told, did not clear expenses upon the first ten millions, which we think probable enough; but he effected sales to a large amount in his own office, on which no allowance of an eighth was made to small purchasers. If he was allowed the gross commission on these under the contract, the first ten million account may be balanced, and his total share of the amount paid by the Government will range somewhere between four hundred and forty and four hundred and fifty thousand dollars gross, but in no case can exceed one-eighth of one per cent. upon three hundred and sixty millions; and, according to our calculation, the whole loan cost less than three-tenths of one per cent. paid to the agencies employed in effecting it. If so, it is the cheapest, as it is the largest loan in history. We average the whole cost of the loan, spreading the expense of Mr. COOKE'S agency over the hundred and fifty millions sold by the Government officials, because the Sub-Treasuries had the benefit of his expenditure of publicity, without which even their share of the sales could not have been effected either in time or in amount. If put upon the market in the usual way, the moneyed capitalists would have required and would have obtained from three, four, five or six per cent. for advancing such an immense amount of cash. We cannot, indeed, see how, by any other means, the Treasury could have done it at so little cost.

In looking over this great effort, it ought not to be forgotten that, for the accommodation of the people and the advancement of the negotiations, Mr. COOKE accepted the currency of all the localities for the bonds sold by his sub-agents, and charged himself with the trouble and often with the cost of converting such funds into Government notes. Bounty Jumping.

NEW-YORK, Monday, April 4, 1864.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

YOUR willingness to expose corruption, particularly such as may be derogatory to the interest of our beloved country, encourages me to call attention, through the medium of your valued paper, to a most egregious outrage that is being daily practiced upon the United States Government.

I allude to the fearful number of desertions from the regiments stationed in the neighborhood of this City.

These desertions are almost entirely of recruits who enlist with that intent, simply to obtain the bounty, and I am positively informed that many of these bounty jumpers enlist in New-York, receive the three hundred and seventy-five dollars and are sent immediately to one of the near-by forts, from which they desert without ever having received a uniform, and the most shameful circumstance is no effort is ever made to bring them to justice.

So great has this evil become that the desertions from a single regiment in New-York harbor, whose maximum number is two hundred, were over fifty in a single month.

To argue that there was no way of preventing this outrageous swindle would be downright folly. Who, then, is to blame? It is a matter that needs looking into.

The regiment to which I allude is one of the best in the service, and has participated in three wars and scores of battles. In each and all of which it won distinguished honors.

In simple justice, then, to these war-worn veterans, this outrageous system of bounty jumping should be put a stop to, and these soulless villains should not be permitted to practically insult our soldiers, and at the same time swindle the "City and County of New-York" and the United States Government.

You have my assurance that every statement herein made is strictly correct, for certainly on a subject of so much moment I would

"Nothing extenuate,
Nor set down aught in malice."

Respectfully yours, E. C. TAYLOR.

Hospital Supplies for Soldiers.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

In a former number of your valuable paper an article appeared detailing to a certain extent the operations of the Government in its care of the sick and wounded soldiers. Public attention has been directed to the fact that medical and hospital supplies of every description, rations, and clothing, were abundantly provided. It was there stated somewhat in detail, how the rations due the soldier, and not suited to his diseased condition, were converted into money, which was expended for him in the purchase of luxuries and comforts, on the requisition of the Surgeon in charge of a hospital.

The public attention is invited to the following official statement of articles purchased from the saved rations, during one month, at one of the General Hospitals in the Department of the East, of three hundred and thirty patients; the money accruing wholly and entirely from rations due, but not drawn from the Commissary, viz.:

Nine hundred and seventy-three pounds butter, 2,750 pounds fish, 283 dozen eggs, 1,071 pounds chickens, 42 pairs fowls, 210 pounds turkey, 4 barrels ale, 12 barrels turnips, 3 barrels onions, 2 barrels apples, 2 barrels carrots, 2 bushels cranberries, 1 box lemons, 450 heads cabbage, 586 pounds cheese, 8½ pounds smoked beef, 277 pounds lamb, 1,500 clams, 10,000 oysters, 200 oranges, 12 bunches celery, 120 pots jelly, 25 pounds mackerel and 8 pumpkins.

Is any comment necessary? The above result is attained and attainable at every military hospital; and more especially if the number of patients is large. There may be and are difficulties at points where supplies are not accessible, and cannot be purchased. These difficulties can be and are obviated by the conscientious Surgeon, who has the means of purchase and a market at hand, however distant.

Will the thinking people examine this subject in all its bearings? The conclusion will be inevitable that the soldiers need no extraneous aid.

Who need it?

The wives and children, the widows and orphans, of those who are sustaining their country's flag, and have fallen under its folds.

Ask that mother who, when the fretting storm was beating without, the embers fast dying out, the last crust consumed, the rent unpaid, to prostitute her daughter for bread, who needs it?

God help them, for there are thousands of such!

The Schleswig-Holstein War—What the Holstein Germans Claim.

NO. 39 NASSAU-STREET, Saturday, April 2, 1864.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

Your correspondent, Mr. BENJAMIN NOYES, in his anxiety to dispel the ignorance which he found "in his travels, and among groups of gentlemen," on the Schleswig-Holstein question, gives you a list of facts, comprising, like an abstract of title to a piece of real estate, the different transactions between feudal lords, kings and princes who have taken the liberty to make over at different times, from one to another, the Duchies of Schleswig-Holstein, with their one million inhabitants. The great reverence for the rights of property make many forget the rights of man, and the merits of a question which involves the happiness of a million of people cannot be explained by anybody who does not stand upon the broadest basis of right and justice. The most essential fact for those to know, who wish for information on the subject, is that the people of Schleswig-Holstein are, with trifling exceptions in the north of Schleswig, Germans. They are Germans by origin, language and customs, and wish to be so. They do not acknowledge the right of anybody, who has feudal claims to the soil, to make Danes of them, or anything else. They do not acknowledge the right of England, France and Russia, nor of Austria and Prussia, to sell them to anybody; and if the people themselves could determine their destiny, there is no doubt that they would prefer to govern themselves to being owned by either the Prince AUGUSTENBORG or King of Denmark. On whom shall these people call for help, when they are overawed by the so-called "Great Powers" of Europe, and outnumbered in military force by their oppressors? On the German nation, of course, of which they form part. This they did in 1848, when, after a short struggle for liberty, they were handed over again, by the treachery of the Prussian Government, to the mercies of the Danes. And now again they call for help, and the German nation, like one man, responds. The Austrian and Prussian Governments, apprehensive of the uprising of the German people, take the matter into their hands, no doubt with the intention to repeat the farce of 1848. How far they will succeed in this we do not yet know; but no matter what the political result of this war will be, whether Austria and Prussia will again hand over the Duchies to the Danes or not, the inhabitants will still refuse to be denationalized, and the question will not be solved as long as that German population is dependent upon the Danish Government.

There is a great deal to be said on the subject, but for those who wish to get at the real merits of the case, it will be interesting to know that after the Danes some weeks ago had evacuated the fortifications erected as bulwarks against Germany, they are now being demolished by the eager hands of the inhabitants of the Duchies. The whole population—men, women and children—turn out with pick and shovel every morning, and in procession, with music and banners, march to those works to level them with their own hands. Is not this argument enough? English and American newspapers call the question complicated, and indulge in flippant ridicule, but nothing in reality is more simple. Every German understands it, and so does every American who knows the meaning of "Germany" and German nationality; who knows what German language and German literature is; who has seen a German University, and knows their productions of art and science. He can appreciate the sense of degradation an independent Schleswig-Holstein must assert under, when he is to be denationalized—to be white-washed into a Dane, and to be made a member of a nation of one sixth half million inhabitants, who have nothing to show for themselves but that they have furnished a hero to one of SHAKESPEARE'S dramatic productions. CHRISTIAN VON HESSE.

CONFISCATION IN NEW-YORK.

Confiscation of Rebel Property—Right of Third Parties to Intervene.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT.

Before Judge Betts.

The United States vs. 1,756 Shares of the Capital Stock of "the Great Western Railroad of 1859," belonging to Leroy M. Wiley.—This was a proceeding to forfeit the property in question, under the Act of Congress of July 17, 1862, which forfeit "the estate and property, money, stocks, credits and effects" of any person "who owning property in any loyal State, shall assist or give aid and comfort to the rebellion." The libel was filed in August last, and process was issued, under which the Marshal seized the property.

An answer was put in on behalf of Wiley, which was on motion stricken out by the court, on the ground that he being an enemy, could have no standing in court. An answer was also put in, in behalf of the Railroad Company, and a motion was made on the part of the United States, to strike that out also. The following is the opinion of the court granting the motion:

BETTS, J. The information demanding the forfeiture of the effects prosecuted in rem in this suit was filed August 25, 1863.

Process of attachment and monition in due form of law issued to the Marshal, under the seal of the court, the same day, against the property named in the information, returnable in court the 15th of September thereafter. On that day it was returned by the Marshal, with a certificate indorsed thereon, officially that he had, on the 25th day of August, 1863, attached the above described 1,756 shares of stock, and given due notice to all persons claiming the same, &c.

It is unnecessary to detail the intermediate steps taken by parties attempting to intervene and make defences to the suit, or all the past proceedings before the court, in respect to the same. It is sufficient to say, that in November Term, 1863, the court, on motion of the United States Attorney, and after hearing the respective counsel, ordered the answer and claim interposed in the case, in defence of the suit in favor and support of the alleged ownership or interest of Le Roy M. Wiley in the stocks and property seized in the suit, to be stricken or withdrawn from the case, because he was a resident in one of the Confederate States, and an enemy of the United States, and as such incapacitated to maintain an action, or become a party litigant in his own right, in a civil cause of action in a court of the United States during such disability.

Oct. 17, 1863, an answer and claim were put on file in the cause in the name of "The Great Western Railroad Company of 1859, intervening for the benefit of themselves, and as trustees of such other persons as may be entitled to 1,756 shares of the capital stock of the said company, and to $33,000 or there about, alleged to be due, owing and unpaid upon certificates or certificates of indebtedness and promises to pay, belonging to, and alleged to be cut off and detached from certain bonds of the said corporation." Under this representation of title or right vested in themselves, that corporation attempt to claim a legal right to intervene and contest the subject matter involved in the suit initiated in this information, and defend the suit as against—(1.) The act of forfeiture charged therein; (2.) The jurisdiction of the court in the case; (3.) The liability of the property seized for an culpability of Wiley, the party charged.

On the 14th of November thereafter, the United States Attorney obtained an order from the court, for four days further time, to file exceptions to the above claim and answer, but such proceedings seem to have been taken by mutual understanding between the respective counsel, that ultimate action was not perfected by the submission to the court of their differences in regard to the pleadings for consideration, until the 16th of February, 1864.

The points for determination on the merits accordingly now are, whether the Railroad Company has perfected a lawful appearance in the cause upon any rights of their own, in relation to the subject in litigation, or whether there is on the evidence any lawful right of representation in the suit, with Le Roy M. Wiley individually, or independent of his personal appearance through the instrumentality of the Railroad Company or its agents.

I perceive no reason for reviewing the ground taken on the previous appearance in defence of Wiley himself, under this same prosecution, that he has no standing in court as a volunteer party. The rule seems to be unequivocally determined both in the English and American practice, that an alien enemy is incapable of maintaining a suit while he retains that character. (Story on Equity Plead., sec. 51.) As an enemy in rebellion or insurrection in open hostility against his own country, he is stamped with all the disabilities of an alien. (Jecker vs. Montgomery, 18 How. R. 112; the Prize Cases, 2 Black. R. 635.)

I think the fair import of the intervention of the Railroad Company, although nominally in a corporate form, is virtually based upon no other interests than those resting personally in Wiley, and consequently cannot be sustained in an American judicatory. Palpably it is only because he cannot vindicate an individual interest in this property by force of law, that an unpalpable interest is surmised and put forward as possessing vitality enough to retain for his benefit, directly or circuitously, through the assumption of equities resting in his agents or creditors, the property which would, under the laws of his just allegiance, be doomed to the expiation of his crimes against his country.

The property in controversy in court was under actual seizure by the Marshal on the process issued against it. Its res was at the time accordingly within the jurisdiction of the court, whether placed in charge of a foreign or alien, natural or political person. If technically, there might be ordinarily impediments to carrying on suits for private debts or claims against property held out of the regular scope and action of the machinery of the law, that consideration cannot avail against confiscation statutes, which remove all limitations and restrictions of the Government in that respect and authorize the arrest of the inculpated property and its forfeiture wherever it may be found, or however it may be represented. (12 Stats. at Large, 591, § 7.)

The statute places the captured property, subject to all the liabilities, if arrested here, in the actual keeping of a remote corporation, as if it was within the authority and vaults of a bank or railroad corporation of the City of New-York.

Independently of these general principles, which subject the effects of traitors to confiscation, by means of summary actions appointed by statutory provisions free of the common law formalities, the parties attempting to intervene in this suit and litigate the rights of the Government in prosecution, do not qualify themselves to intermeddle in the matter. The 26th rule in Admiralty of the Supreme Court requires every person, in order to be received as a defendant entitled to controvert the right to property of any kind seized in rem by another, "to verify his own claim on oath, stating that the claimant, by whom or on whose behalf the claim is made, is the true and bona fide owner, and that no other person is the owner thereof."

No such proof is affixed to the claim in this instance; nothing beyond a hypothetical and equivocal intervention is furnished at all, and that is by a person having no personal interest in the matter, and not being a legal representative of the corporation attempting to appear, and who is supposed to apprehend it may incur a contingent liability in respect to the effects seized.

No adequate evidence is therefore before the court, authorizing the railroad to appear in the cause to resist its process, or question the full right of the informants to press the same to a legal decision. The case of Brown vs. The United States, 8 Cranch, 110, cited by the claimant's counsel, fortifies the principle of this decision. The seizure of the property was there adjudged illegal, because there was no authority of law justifying its condemnation, whilst this proceeding is sanctioned by express statute. (Act Aug. 6, 1861; July 17, 1862.)

The motion on the part of the United States Attorney to strike the claim and answer from the files of the court in this suit is granted.

For the United States, Mr. Smith; for the company, Mr. Lord.

FURTHER PROCEEDINGS IN THE CASE.

The District Attorney then applied to the court for a decree of condemnation and forfeiture against the property. He laid before the court the deposition of a witness who testified, among other things, that he had known Wiley seven or eight years; last saw him at Eufaula, Ala., a little more than a year ago; heard him deprecating the depreciation of the rebel currency, and giving his counsel about measures to restore it; his character as a zealous rebel was well known throughout the community.

"Wiley has freely given his money in support of the rebellion, to my knowledge." "And upon various important occasions has supported, by his presence and assistance, the rebel movement." "He was looked up to as a leader." "When Gen. Bragg was at Pensacola, Wiley took an active part in aiding and assisting the Alabama troops raised to reinforce Bragg against the Union armies—helping to support the war—furnishing rations and assistance freely from his plantation—expending his money freely for the comfort of the troops."

Afterward, at Montgomery, the rebel troops, remarked how handsomely they had been treated by Wiley.

"Wiley, on various occasions, personally encouraged and aided the enlistments and recruiting for the rebel army, and many young men in his neighborhood actually joined the rebel army through his instrumentality."

"Wiley has received money from the North since the war broke out. He sent a man by the name of Heard to New-York to attend to his business affairs, and Heard returned, bringing money with him, and having accomplished his mission." And Wiley paid and used money freely there in aid of the rebel cause. His sending Heard North was subsequent to August, 1861, and his receipt of money from the North was subsequent to that date."

April 5.—At the opening of court this morning, Judge Betts announced his decision, denying the application for a decree of condemnation on the ground that there was not sufficient evidence submitted to him that Wiley was an enemy, or was the owner of the property in question, and referring the papers back to the District Attorney for such action as he should think fit.

Summary Dismissal of Army and Naval Officers.

JUDGE-ADVOCATE-GENERAL'S OFFICE, March 25, 1864.

Hon. E. M. Stanton, Secretary of War:

Upon the bill entitled "An Act to Regulate the Dismissal of Officers in the Military and Naval Service," now pending in the Senate, and referred by you for my consideration, I have the honor to submit the following observations: (Here follows a particular statement of the character of the bill. Mr. HOLT then proceeds as follows:) From the foundation of the Government the President has been in the habit of summarily dismissing officers in the land and naval service. The power to do so seems to inhere in him under the Constitution, as Commander-in-Chief of the army and navy. His action in this respect has been attended by no oppression or abuses, and its strict legality cannot be contested. The exercise, therefore, of this authority since the outbreak of the rebellion, has nothing in it that savors of usurpation or innovation, or that should excite alarm.

That the lodgment of such a power in the Commander-in-Chief of our army is necessary to preserve its discipline, the experience of our military men would generally attest. The necessity is most manifest and pressing in the case of an army of volunteers, suddenly withdrawn from the pursuits of civil life and impatient of those restraints, without which military forces in the field must soon degenerate into a mob. The government of such an army often calls for punishments more severe than those which are fatally inflicted through the slow process of a military trial.

The authority to suspend without pay or emolument, force limited period, as given by the bill, would prove a most inadequate substitute for the power of dismissal, in the emergencies of military life, and especially during a period of active hostilities, the interests of the service require not only that such officers shall be instantly dismissed, but that their places shall be immediately supplied. This bill makes such supply impracticable in the case of delinquent and suspended officers, because it contemplates no vacancy.

It is well known that in time of war the convening of a Court-martial for the trial of officers within the ten days prescribed by this bill would not, in a very large number of cases, be possible, without serious detriment to the service.

As there could be no trial without an arrest of the officer, should he think proper to avoid such arrest, as he might do by flight, he would be suspended, under this bill, be summarily dismissed only for having been "absent for 20 days without leave," of whatever other crime he may have been guilty. Had such a law existed when Gen. TWIGGS traitorously surrendered his department to the rebels, instead of being dishonorably dismissed for "treachery to his country's flag," as he was, by the President, he would, though in arms against the Government, have been continued on the Army Register, unless it had been thought proper to dismiss him, simply for "absence without leave."

The number of dismissals which have taken place since the beginning of the war is not large, all the circumstances of the service considered. The Government has acted upon the testimony furnished at the moment, and mistakes have, in some cases, occurred. In some instances, where injustice has been alleged that wrong has been done, the cases have been carefully reexamined, and all the proofs and testimonials offered in behalf of the officer well considered, and it is believed that it has rarely happened that a correct conclusion has not been finally reached. These reexaminations have constituted one of the most laborious duties of this office, and I can bear testimony to the patience and partiality with which they have been conducted.

To the restoration of these officers through the instrumentality of a court-martial, as proposed by the bill, several seemingly insuperable obstacles present themselves.

1. Their places, after dismissal, were, in almost every instance, filled by appointments legally and properly made. How is it possible to restore them to positions not vacant, but which are fully occupied by others?

2. The regiments in which many of these officers belonged have been disbanded. In reference to this class, how would it be practicable to enforce the provisions of this bill?

3. These officers are now as much out of the service as if they had never belonged to it, and this by force of orders in every respect regular and legal. A revocation of these orders of the President would certainly reinstate the officers in cases where the vacancies remain unfilled; but is it competent for Congress to make such revocation? I think clearly not.

4. The orders being unrevoked, and the officers being out of the service, they can only be restored by reappointment. Under the Constitution, however, the larger part of these appointments must be made by the Governors of the States, and the remainder by the President. Is there any principle of precedent which would justify Congress in an attempt to exercise these functions of the President and Governors, by substituting for such Presidential and Gubernatorial action the simple declaration of a general court-martial.

5. The Government could not investigate through courts-martial the hundreds of cases which this bill would bring up for trial, without such a draft upon the officers of the army needed for active field service as must greatly impair the efficiency of the campaign now about to open in every part of the theatre of the war. To this should be added the fact that the witnesses to the transactions to be examined into are, doubtless, many of them dead, and others so scattered by the fortunes of the war as to be unavailable—a condition of things which would render it impossible to accept the action of the courts-martial sitting in judgment on these offences, many of them long past, as satisfactory or reliable.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

J. HOLT, Judge-Advocate-General.

Female Oratory.

LECTURE BY MISS WEBB AT COOPER INSTITUTE.

Miss EMMA WEBB, who will, perhaps, be better recognized as one of the Webb Sisters, of east-side theatre celebrity, delivered a lecture last evening at Cooper Institute, in answer to Miss ANNA E. DICKINSON'S "Lessons of the Hour." The audience was small, numbering not over four hundred. Promptly at 8 o'clock, however, Miss WEBB was introduced by Mr. THEO. MARBURY, and commenced her lecture. Although a woman, she had been studying politics; she had been forced into the study by this cruel and fratricidal war. She was interested only in that she had friends on both sides; but she felt it her mission to show that our armies and the armies of the enemy marched, not only over the graves of brave men, but over the hearts of the widow and orphan. Was not such a war a curse? The ancients, threw captured works of art into the Tiber—were we not doing worse?

She had listened to the discourse of Miss DICKINSON, in this very hall, and elsewhere. She considered Miss DICKINSON'S remarks as feeding and fostering violence and bloodshed, impelling the emotion which deluges the country in blood. Miss D. opens her lecture by exhorting men to kill one another, instead of advising peace. The poor soldier, innocent and blameless victim of others' ambition, laid down his life, while the authors and instigators of the war rode by in splendor. Mr. LINCOLN has said the soldier died that the country might have a new birth of freedom. Miss WEBB insisted the nation had scarcely entered on its boyhood; and after a glowing eulogium of WASHINGTON and the founders of the republic, asked, Are we not free? and considered it fortunate such matters were so easily set right at this day. She considered the new birth of freedom an overthrow of the Constitution, and that an act of revolution. A minister had asked President LINCOLN to alter the Constitution, and he replied he would give it his careful attention. Such an act in the time of our forefathers would have been the signal of a uprising and rebellion. In England it would have cost the ruler his life; but here, as a woman, she could only admire this gentle virtue in the sovereign people. Miss DICKINSON claims this struggle to be for the freedom of all mankind, which means the negroes of the South, and this she considered shameful and degrading.

Emancipation was invariably a curse to the white and of no benefit to the black. England's twenty millions of pounds in Jamaica for black freedom were so many pounds for white Slavery. The normal condition of the African was Slavery. Like greenbacks here, they were simply "legal-tender." She defied the Abolitionists to name a spot where the negro was happy or civilized, except as subordinate to the white race. She considered the effect of emancipation demoralizing and barbarous—demanded to hear of the men who applauded such an atrocious innovation in our country. Miss DICKINSON says this is not a war for class or color. If it were, what mother would allow her son to fight—what wife her husband? Miss D. says national progression must cease, or Slavery must die. She would say Abolitionism must cease, or Constitutional liberty die; to this end she cited the progress of the nation, its power and glory, until the breaking out of the rebellion. Miss D. had said the cause of the war was Slavery. Was money the cause of theft? Abolitionists made a row over Slavery, and "that's what's the matter."

Miss D. sneers at Gen. MCCLELLAN, as a General who shall be nameless here, and evermore. Shall he be so? Called three times to save the Capital—go to the army; go to the villages, cities and towns; go to the dying bed of the soldier, and see. Miss DICKINSON'S assertion was an act of fear in behalf of her party; and foreshadowed the tyranny of the Government. Thank God, we have some staunch men of truth left—SAYMOUR, of Connecticut, and the valiant and defiant VALLANDIGHAM. Miss D. sneered at Congress for resolving that the war was waged for the enforcement of the laws only, but pronounces it for the purpose of freeing the negro. Wouldn't it be well to send her to the army to teach our soldiers what they are fighting for? No tears for the widow and orphan, and no sustenance for the orphans of the war! [illegible] ideas? Miss D. says we are fighting for a flag. Yes, a flag half Africanized, half white—not American. The country should be called New Africa.

Miss WEBB'S peroration consisted of a recitation of HOOD'S "Song of the Shirt," as applicable to our starving and suffering people.

Her remarks were frequently interrupted by applause from her sympathizing audience.

FOREIGN ITEMS.

—The Ceylon Times, of Feb. 7, tells of the following disaster to a Government immigration vessel, on the ferry between Paumben and the Coast: "The Andy Lanhsey, a bark of 150 tons, was bound from Vengalle to Paumben, having on board 120 coolies and a crew, numbering 14. At 7 o'clock on the morning of the 9th inst., the timbell noticed a large waterspout about 10 miles to the northeast, but as he was steering east N. W., its presence did not persuade him any uneasiness, and he went below. There was a good breeze blowing at the time, and there had been a little rain in the early morning, confining the coolies to the hold. It seems that shortly before 8 o'clock the waterspout was seen rapidly approaching the vessel, and the timbal accordingly put her about to try and avoid it. However, all his efforts proved fruitless; the spout came nearer, and from the whirling motion at its base lifted the doomed ship about three feet out of the water and instantly capsized her. All this had occurred so rapidly that the result was wholly unexpected on board, and most of the coolies were still below. Out of the 120, only 7 escaped, by holding on to floating pieces of timber until 2 o'clock in the afternoon, when a passing ship picked them up. One of the crew was also drowned. The vessel became a total wreck, and sank in 31 feet of water.

—A letter from Paris to the Manchester Examiner tells of a visit paid to Madame GAUL, who, with her husband, MARIN, is now residing in the magnificent mansion they have recently built and furnished in the Champs Elysee at a cost of something like two million francs. The great artist, we are told, was to be seen "wandering about this splendid mansion, attired in brown velvet, a la 'Lucrezia Borgia,' looking the very personification of royalty—the furniture of the saloons, all after the old fashion, with oak carvings, sombre tapestries, and massive gildings, assisting to complete the illusion." In the midst of so much luxury, which a long and arduous career has secured, Gaul still signs for the excitement of public life. Her voice is wonderfully fresh, and in personal appearance she is equally remarkable. "Ma voglie canture" is the leading theme of her discourse, and she declares that as soon as the time expires under the arrangement made with GYE, by which she bound herself not to sing in London, the voice of "Norma" shall again be heard in the great city. This will be at the end of 1865.

—Notes and Queries gives the following information regarding an institution which has been transplanted to some of the colleges in this country, a list of the votes of those members of the Government who are in the House of Commons, is produced at the Whitehall Dinner, and he who is lowest on the list is probably regarded, by his Cambridge friends at least, as the wooden spoon. During the administration of Sir ROBERT PEEL, when the Ministerial party was starting for Greenwich, one of them, in passing through Hungerford Market, bought a child's penny mug and a wooden spoon. After dinner, when the list of votes had been read out, the penny mug, on which was painted either "Jesus," or "For a good boy," was presented, with all due solemnity, to Sir JAMES GRAHAM, and the wooden spoon to Sir WILLIAM FOLLETT. This is probably the origin of the statement quoted by our correspondent.

—Every one will remember the celebrated case of Sir JOHN DEAS PEET, the fraudulent London banker. A recent copy of the Madras Times gives some curious information concerning him. Immediately after he was sentenced to penal servitude, Lady PEET realized all the property settled upon her, and proceeded without delay to Sydney, where she purchased a beautiful seat in the suburbs. Her husband having arrived at a penal settlement in another part of Australia as one of a gang of convicts, the wife of the convict baronet applied to the Government for his services, and was permitted to employ him as her "assigned servant." We need scarcely add that having thus released him from uncomfortable restraint, she placed all the newly-purchased property in his hands, and has since led a very quiet life in his company.

—A letter from Rome states that a very interesting discovery has been just made in continuing the excavations in the narthex of the old Basilica of San Clemente—a painting, representing our Saviour, seated and in the act of giving the benediction to two personages kneeling before him, presented by angels. The outstretched hand of the Saviour is placed according to the Greek form, i. e., the thumb and third digit welded. The Saviour is surrounded by a deep nimbus, on either side are full length figures of St. Clement and St. Andrew, with their names, and a long inscription underneath. It is very possible that this fresco may be older than the other hitherto discovered in the narthex of the Basilica, possibly dating from the middle of the eleventh century.

—The telegraphic line, says the Moniteur, comprised between Bagdad and Hilla, on the Euphrates, was inaugurated on the 3d February, and the works necessary for the completion of the line, which is to extend as far as Bassora, are being carried on with great activity. When completed, India will be united to Europe. Hopes are entertained that this important means of communication may be opened to the public about the month of May next.

—At a recent concert given at the Tuileries, the principal artists were Mlle. PATTI and Mme. LAGRANGE, MM. MARIO, NAUDIN and DELLE SEDIE. The splendid finale in "Ernani," "Sommo Carlo," went off magnificently, and DELLE SEDIE produced a powerful effect by his singing of VERDI'S "Eri Tu," from "Il Ballo."

—It is stated that Field-Marshal VON WRANGEL has sent to the Crown Princess of Prussia a Danish cannon-ball which fell near to the Crown Prince while he was making a reconnoissance, and that her royal highness has caused the ball to be placed in her drawing-room at the Potsdam Palace.

—The revival of DAVID'S charming opera "Lalla Rookh" has been a great success at the Paris "Opera Comique." This is a musical work, with which, like many other clever and interesting French pieces, we have yet to make acquaintance in this country.

—A few days after the appearance of the Emperor's "Julius Cæsar," a new drama of the same title, by D'ENNERY and MECQUARD, will be performed, which the authors hope will profit by the sensation created by the book itself.

—A new comic periodical is about to appear, edited by Mr. THOMAS SHEIR JERROLD, (youngest son of the late DOUGLAS JERROLD,) aided by a staff of contributors, including some of the cleverest and most popular writers and artists of the day.

—Dr. MOSENTHAL, the German professor, who wrote "Leah," has written a play for Miss BATEMAN, in which she will appear when the attractions of "Leah" begin to wane, which at present seems a very distant period.

—Mr. CHARLES READE has added to the second edition of his story of Hard Cash, just published, a new preface, citing a number of cases from actual life in support of his views of the evils of the system of private lunatic asylums.

—FRANCOIS HUGO'S French translation of SHAKESPEARE'S works will be completed by April. He is said to have received a remuneration of 50,000 francs for his work—a somewhat higher sum, probably, than that which the poet received.

—Mr. BOUCICAULT still clings to the sensation drama, and has just finished a new piece called "The Happiness," of course an Irish subject, as the title indicates.

—It is said that RICHARD WAGNER is about to visit London, in order to direct in person the performance of his "Tannhauser" at Her Majesty's Theatre.

—Mlle. TITIENS is still at Naples. Her engagement at the San Carlo terminates at the end of this month, when she will forthwith return to London.

—Our Mutual Friend is the title of the new story by Mr. CHARLES DICKENS, about to commence in a monthly series on Saturday, 30th April.

—The aged King of Wurtemburg is gradually sinking, and it is expected he will not survive many days.

—Mr. SOTHERN will shortly appear at the Haymarket as David Garrick in a new three-act comedy.

—ROSSINI has received from the Emperor of the French the Grand Cross of the Legion of Honor.

As your many readers are doubtless anxious to know when GARIBALDI will actually land in England, allow us to give the following information: GARIBALDI embarked on the Peninsular and Oriental Company's boat which left Marseilles on the 30th, and would arrive at Malta on the 2d, and will be at Southampton by Peninsular and Oriental Company's boat, which is expected there on Sunday, April 3. He will stay at Brook, Isle of Wight, for ten or twelve days, and it is proposed that he should come to London on Saturday, April 16, being half holiday. This information may be relied upon.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT,
OFFICE OF COMPTROLLER OF THE CURRENCY,
WASHINGTON, Feb. 27, 1864.

WHEREAS, BY SATISFACTORY EVIdence presented to the undersigned, it has been made to appear that the Fourth National Bank of the City of New-York, in the County of New-York, and State of New-York, has been duly organized under and according to the requirements of the Act of Congress, entitled, "An Act to provide a national currency, secured by a pledge of United States stocks, and to provide for the circulation and redemption thereof," approved Feb. 25, 1863, and has complied with all the provisions of said act required to be complied with before commencing the business of banking:

Now, therefore, I, HUGH McCULLOCH, Comptroller of the Currency, do hereby certify that the Fourth National Bank of the City of New-York, County of New-York, and State of New-York, is authorized to commence the business of banking under the act aforesaid.

In testimony whereof, witness my hand and seal of office this 27th day of February, 1864.
(Seal.) HUGH McCULLOCH,
Comptroller of the Currency.

NOTICE TO THE FIRST AND SECOND MORTGAGE BONDHOLDERS OF THE PITTSBURGH, FORT WAYNE AND CHICAGO RAILWAY COMPANY.—The Board of Directors of the Pittsburgh, Fort Wayne and Chicago Railway Company have requested the undersigned to call meetings of the First Mortgage and Second Mortgage Bondholders in pursuance of the provisions of the deeds of trust, for the purpose of considering certain modifications of the present financial system of the company, to which the assent of a majority in interest of each of those classes of bondholders by a vote at a meeting is necessary. The principle of the proposed measures was submitted to the annual meeting of the corporation held at Pittsburgh on the 16th inst., at which were represented a majority of the stockholders and of each class of the bondholders, and was unanimously approved.

The undersigned, therefore, in exercise of the authority conferred upon them by article 13 of the First and Second Deeds of Trust, give notice that will be held at the banking house of Winslow, Lanier & Co., No. 52 Wall-st., in the City of New-York, on THURSDAY, the 14th day of April, 1864, at 11 A. M., for the purpose of considering the aforesaid measures.

At such meetings the bondholders, if registered, may vote in person or by proxy.

Registration on the Voting Register can be made by any holder at the office or agency of the company, at the banking house of Winslow, Lanier & Co., where the books are now open for that purpose, on presentation by the holder of his bonds, or on his filing the written order of the person last registered as the holder.

The registration was originally in the names of the persons to whom the bonds were issued. In cases in which the bonds have since changed hands, the present holder can vote only by registering himself, or upon the proxy of the person last registered.

A general attendance of the bondholders is earnestly requested, as well to act on the questions aforesaid, as to perfect the organization contemplated in Article 13 of the Deeds of Trust.

The meetings of the First and Second Mortgage Bondholders will be held separately, but at the same time and place and the holders of the Third Mortgage Bonds are invited to be present, though their action is not required by the Trust Deeds.

The resolutions adopted at the annual meeting, and the resolution of the Board of Directors requesting a call of meetings of the bondholders, are subjoined.

JOHN FERGUSON, } Trustees for the First and SAMUEL J. TILDEN, } Second M'ge Bondholders.

RESOLUTIONS.

Recommended as the Board of Directors to the Stockholders for adoption at the Annual Meeting, March 16, 1864.

Resolved, That it is expedient that expenditures for construction, equipment and objects pertinent thereto, involving new capital, should in the main be provided for by an increase of capital stock of the company.

Resolved, That the increase of capital stock should be made solely for the purpose of building and completing a double track, or such part thereof as may be expedient, and for equipping the road and providing such additional rolling stock, machinery, appurtenances and other facilities as may be necessary to properly do all the business which may offer, and for no other purpose; and should only be issued from year to year in such amounts as the stockholders at their annual meetings may decide upon. Their decision shall be based upon detailed estimates made by the Board of Directors of the amount of money necessary for the work of the year, and that the new issue of stock shall only be sold after public notice.

Resolved, That the increase of capital for 1864 shall not exceed $2,500,000.

Resolved, That the stockholders hereby recommend, and, as far as may be necessary, authorize the Board of Directors to make such agreement or arrangement with the holders of the bonds under the trust deeds as will enable them to increase the capital stock, as indicated in the preceding resolution.

Adopted unanimously by vote of 24,188,000 out of $6,500,000 of stock; $2,750,000 out of $3,250,000 of first mortgage bonds; $2,700,000 out of $3,150,000 of second mortgage bonds, and $1,325,000 out of $2,000,000 of third mortgage bonds; $400,000 not voting because not registered.

Resolution adopted by the Board of Directors this day:

"Resolved, That the Trustees under the mortgages, Samuel J. Tilden and John Ferguson, be and they are hereby requested to call, at the earliest moment possible, a meeting of the bondholders, in the City of New-York, to act upon the resolutions adopted by the stockholders at their Annual Meeting in the City of Pittsburgh on the 16th day of March, 1864, and to obtain, if possible, the assent of the bondholders thereto.

MORSE & CO.,

APRIL 5, 1864.

NEW-YORK, April 4, 1864.

I visited this Mine in the month of December, 1863, accompanied by Guido Kustel, the most distinguished Metallurgist and Mining Engineer on the Pacific coast, for many years the Manager of the Ophir Works, and author of a valuable treatise on the "Processes of Silver and Gold Extraction," recently published in California. My opinion of the value and quality of this Mine is based on information derived from this gentleman, and on my own observations at the Mine.

The Mine is situated in Arizona, about three miles north of the northern boundary line of Sonora, and five miles distant from the celebrated Mowry Silver Mines; it is accessible at all seasons of the year, either by the way of Los Angelos, Libertad, or Guaymas. But little work has been done in developing the mine; enough, however, to discover the width and extent of the lode and determine the quality and value of the ores.

Where the shaft is sunk the vein is from four to six feet wide between lime-rock and garnet, running east and west, and exhibits galena or sulphuret of lead, carbonate of lead, zinc-blend and copper-pyrites; the richest is the sulphuret of lead, assaying one hundred and fifty-five dollars per ton; the vein has been prospected about half a mile. Mr. Kustel, in a letter addressed to the San Francisco owners, says: "The San Antonio lode appears to be well defined; the shaft is sunk, a good wide vein of ore easy to reduce by fire, and will pay on an average, according to the proportions of the different metals, from seventy to ninety dollars per ton."

I believe there is an abundant supply of this ore, and that by an expenditure of a comparatively small sum of money, the mine can be put in a condition to produce 40 tons per day; if this ore averages only $60 per ton, the gross product of the mine would exceed $2,000 per day; the entire cost of mining and reducing a ton of this ore will not exceed twenty dollars.

On the premises, about 200 yards from San Antonio lode, is a N. E. direction, there is a very rich copper lode, six feet wide; the ore which we obtained from this lode, considered a fair average, assayed 30 ⅌ cent. of copper and $76 in silver. Miners can be obtained in any number in the immediate vicinity, at about $10 ⅌ month.

The reduction works of the mine are three miles distant from the mine, consisting of a small engine and two furnaces. There is an abundance of wood and water for all purposes on the property.

I consider the San Antonio a very valuable Silver Mine, if worked with skill and energy, it will produce most satisfactory results.
